He sot by der fire a dinking
Und he's eyes vas on der shdofe,
He's pipe vas glinched bedwen his doods
Und he's libs dem didn'd mofe;
He's hands vas crossed agross he's breast,
Agross he's breast so glose,
Und dree big dears run oud he's eye
Und drickled down he's nose.

For he vas dinking of gone by days,
Ven he vas a leedle shild,
Ven he use to lay on he's mudder's breast,
Und kinder draw id mild;
Ven he use to sot by he's mudder's knee
Und blay mit her abron shdrings,
Und vent to shleep mit der kidden oat,
Und all dot kind of dings.

He vas liing he's shildhood's days agin—
He vas just a boy vonce more—
He dought he done like he use to done,
"Shlide down der cellar door;"
Blay "shnab der vip," "I shby der voof,"
Und oder dings so gay,
Und dree more dears run down he's nose
Und passed forever avay.

He's heart vas glad—a grade big shmile
Dot seddled on he's face—
Mit all der beoples in der world

CHAPTER XIII.

A DECLARATION AND A PROPOSAL.

Lord Henry Lyttleton stood hesitatingly in the doorway for a few moments, and then slowly advanced and approached the actress.

"Pardon me, my lord," said Lucy, "that I have made you wait so long in order to give you but a few minutes' audience; for really I can do no more; I play this evening, and must read my part over; it is necessary besides that I should collect myself—that I should be alone."

"You seem greatly moved—greatly agitated," said his lordship.

"No, indeed you are mistaken," hastily cried the actress, "I am preoccupied with this evening's representation—that is all, I assure you. Come now, what had you to say to me—I am prepared to hear you, to speak, but pray speak quickly."

His lordship, however, made no attempt to speak, but stood silently and very earnestly gazing on Lucy. And after a long pause, she resumed:—

"Really, my lord, it appears to me that you are even more grave than usual; you are, in good truth, almost solemn."

Almost solemn indeed was the tone in which Lord Lyttleton, now at last breaking silence, said:—

"Lucinda, do not sport with me, I entreat you; until this moment I have spoken to you only of my love—I have spoken to you only of the future and never of the past."

"Mine?" hastily cried Lucy.

"No," he quietly responded, "your past is known to me."

"Well, and knowing it?" anxiously exclaimed the actress.

"I love you," forcibly replied his lordship.

Lucy tendered him her hand as, somewhat moved she said:—

"You are generous, my lord."

"I have never learned to say but what I think, Lucinda. I am, I know, something of a savage, and the forests and the mountains have pleased me far more than balls and theatres."

"Oh, my lord, you do yourself injustice," smiled Lucy.

"Indeed I do not," returned his lordship. "The task of causing our name to shine in the world, and at the court, I have left to my cousin, Viscount Greville Lyttleton."

"But he, I believe, is now absent from England?"

"Yes, he is now in America—sent thither on a diplomatic mission. For myself, I have always sought obscurity and solitude, and had found happiness in dwelling with my dear and noble mother at our ancestral castle in Wales."

"And yet you have left it?"

"The day when I was obliged to quit it and come to London—then I saw you, and my life was changed; I had no longer within my heart but one desire, one hope—to be loved by you!"

"Oh no, never, my lord, no more," cried Lucy.

But his lordship, unheeding that attempted interruption, continued with great warmth:—

"I became intoxicated with your looks, with your words! proud of your triumphs, happy in your joys, sad when you were in grief; I have lived by your life, erasing from mine all the hours I was compelled to pass away from you——"

"Oh, hush, hush!"

"Do you then doubt me, Lucinda? Do you disbelieve what now I say to you?"

"No, my lord," earnestly exclaimed the actress.

"The homage to which I am so accustomed wounds and humiliates me; your love renders me happy and proud of myself——"

"Ah! Lucinda," he cried, hurriedly drawing nearer to her.

But she retreated a step, and with a gesture forbade his further approach.

"Just precisely because it has taken its source in esteem," said Lucy, "that love has had no alm, and must always be without hope."

"Listen to me," and Lord Lyttleton's manner was now indeed grave and solemn, "listen to me well. For three centuries the Lyttletons have devoted their lives to the glory of their country, and many of them have died for her. In the history of their house the Lyttleton's count princely unions and royal friendships."

"I know it, my lord."

Bowing low to her, "Miss Mordaunt," he said, "Lord Henry Lyttleton places at your feet his fortune and his name."

"What say you?" Lucy faltered, almost overpowered with that unlooked for proposal.

"I ask you, Lucinda, if you will be my wife?"

"Your wife, I? Oh, it is madness!"

"And wherefore?"

"Wherefore?—You know well that my origin was poor and mean, that I am now nothing more than an actress."

"What matters, Lucinda, what you have been, since I love you?"

"Yes," sadly cried Lucy, "you do love me; impossible that you could have given me a more striking or convincing proof of that. And Henry, I also love you, and I also wish to prove it to you."

Again Lyttleton was flying towards her, and again she waved him from her.

"Hear what I have to say," she proceeded; "I refuse the honor you have offered me—I refuse the sacrifice that you would make to me."

"Sacrifice?"

"Yes. What would the world say, what would say your high and aristocratic mother? Oh, no—Lucinda Mordaunt the actress will not be your mistress, but she cannot become your wife."

Slowly she walked from him, and he darted after her.

"Lucinda," he passionately exclaimed, "many others, no doubt, before me, have said that they would die for you; the opportunity arrived, they would not perhaps have done it; but I—Oh! Lucinda, I would do it—to arrive at the end which my heart has proposed to reach; I can sacrifice everything, Lucinda, everything, even to my life, and on the day when I should see myself compelled to renounce my dearest hope I would die, I swear it to you."

"For Heaven's sake," commenced Lucy.

"If you doubt it listen to me," interrupted Lyttleton. "When about eighteen years of age, I, in a moment of madness, no doubt, failed in the respect I owed to my mother. That was a fact without example in the history of our family, and that nameless act, my savage nature alone would have urged me to forget. My mother said not a word to me, but sent to me a command that I should retire to a part of the castle, far away from that which she was occupying. It was an old turret built upon rocks, and which looked down upon a small river, on the banks of which the Duchess of Lyttleton was wont to walk and meditate. I had already written ten supplicating letters, but all had remained unanswered; then, in a last letter, I swore to my mother that if she persisted in refusing to me the pardon that I implored, I would precipitate myself from the window of my prison——"

"Oh! Heaven," exclaimed Lucy, "but you did not—no, no?"

"Did I not?" pursued his lordship. "Hearken! My mother despised that menace, and on the following day, passing on horseback at the foot of that turret, she found me stretched upon the earth, bleeding and inanimate."

"Lucy uttered a faint scream and sank back into a chair."

"I had kept my word," added Lyttleton. Very narrowly did I escape death, but my mother has pardoned me."

"Henry," faltered the actress, "you were then a boy, and now you are a man."

"My heart, Lucinda, has grown no older."

And, smilingly, he added:—

"And I am still as great a savage as formerly."

"Oh, Henry, why have you told me all that."

"Because I would have you remember that adventure if ever I should say to you, I will die, Lucinda, if you love me not."

Lucy rose from her seat, and several times, with rapid and uneven steps, paced the room. Presently stopping before Lyttleton, she said, in a half remonstrating, half coaxing tone:—

"Come, come, Henry, you are mad, and I must have reason for us both."

"Reason," he bitterly exclaimed, "ah, yes, I comprehend you. Oh, you love me not as I love you. I offer to place a coronet on your brow, and you have not courage to sacrifice to me the bouquets cast at the feet of the actress."

"Dear and precious to me are those coronets which, lasting but a single day, then fade and wither. Yes, my triumphant evenings have rewarded me for twenty years of misery and suffering. I would have purchased them at the price of my life!"

"Oh, Lucinda," fairly moaned the young lord.

"I swear to you, however, those crowns, those triumphs, that renown, I would unhesitatingly have sacrificed them all to you; to you, poor and obscure, I would have given all, as I have already given you my first, my only love."

Lord Lyttleton rebounded a step and uttered a joyful cry.

"But," slowly and sadly the actress continued, "to you, noble and rich; to you, who count in your family royal friendships; to you, who may, like your ancestors, dream of a princely union, I should bring degradation, the shame of having wedded with an actress. That shame and degradation your name would not be sufficiently great to efface; the world's coldness, perhaps scorn, would gnaw your very heart—then would you curse your weakness of to-day; you would blush for your wife, and that, Henry, is what I am determined to prevent."

Again was he approaching, as if about to embrace her.

"No, no," she cried, "leave me your esteem, your friendship—leave me my courage."

"Lucinda, you have said that you love me," he exclaimed, "and you shall be my wife! Oh, no longer hesitate, 'tis you alone who sacrifice aught to our happiness. Hear me, you must not again set foot upon that accursed stage, which has so nearly separated me from you; to-morrow, perhaps, you would no longer listen to me."

Her mind and heart in a terribly perturbed state, Lucy again commenced to pace the chamber.

"This very evening," pursued Lyttleton, "all shall be prepared for our departure—we will fly without looking behind us, and by dint of tenderness and respect, by lavishing on you the fondest love, I swear that I will cause you to forget your past sorrows, all your past renown."

"Henry, Henry," exclaimed the actress, completely carried away, and with transport Lyttleton snatched her to his arms.

At that moment a door was half opened, and Andrew Wentworth looked into the apartment.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE FASCINATIONS OF THE STAGE.

At the interruption Lucy broke from her lover's embrace, and his lordship turned quite angrily towards vance, said timidly:—

"Ah, there is still some one here; may a body come in?"

"Yes—yes—certainly," said Lucy, recovering from her agitation.

"I beg pardon, sorry to intrude, but——" and the old man laughed—"you told me to study your part for you, and I have got letter perfect in it."

"My dear old friend—you had, I think, a favor to ask of me?"

"Yes."

"Speak then, dispose of me."

Lord Lyttleton, who had been made aware of the request that Wentworth was now about to urge, was not without a certain degree of anxiety as to how the actress would reply.

"My dear child," said the old actor, "I have arranged to take a benefit—the first time in all my life that in London I have attempted such a thing; certainly I have a great many private friends, and I have contented myself with a ticket night, and getting half the amount of all I sold has always paid me very well."

"Yes, daddy, I know."

"As for the general public," laughed Wentworth, "they care nothing about me, and I believe would rather not see me on the stage at all. But be that as it may, I have arranged to take a benefit—and I dare say, Lucinda dear, you can guess how I come to be so bold?"

Lucinda slowly and thoughtfully nodded her head.

"Yes, my child, you know that—that without you I should not most likely make my expenses. Benefits very often turn out to be a loss—and so I—I have come to ask you to play Julia for me—that is the part which first brought you before the public, to send all the people mad, and a great many people still consider it to be your greatest character——"

"Yes."

Lyttleton fixed on Lucy a meaning look, and, thus reminded, she became embarrassed, and, stammering forth a few unmeaning words, Wentworth not rightly interpreting them, hastily and seemingly quite astounded, exclaimed:—

"Is it possible that you refuse me?"

"No, no—but——"

"Mr. Wentworth," interrupted his lordship, "Miss Mordaunt quits the stage."

The old man looked bewildered.

"What did your lordship say? I beg pardon, but I—I did not exactly understand——"

"I say, my dear Mr. Wentworth, that your child will soon be in quite another condition of life."

"Another condition?" cried the actor, with a greatly puzzled air, "really I cannot altogether——"

"I mean, sir, that she will soon, I hope, be Lady Lyttleton."

"Lady Lyttleton, what for? what will be the good of that?"

Lucy, placing her arm around the good old man's neck, whispered to him:—

"He loves me, and offers me his hand and name."

Wentworth was completely stupefied.

"That's a different matter," he stammered. "And so you leave us all, eh? Run away from the public that has made you its idol—leave me and—and all the rest of us."

He drew forth his pocket handkerchief, wiped his eyes, blew his nose, and then, forcing a laugh, he observed:—

"Ah, well, never mind, it doesn't matter much—I shall find some other piece to play—or perhaps the manager will let me off, and I can have a ticket night, as always before."

Lucy cast down her eyes but spoke not. Lyttleton, overjoyed, said:—

"Mr. Wentworth, I promise that you shall lose nothing."

"No, no," muttered Andrew, "nothing at all—at least, nothing worth talking about."

"What would have been, think you, the receipt at your benefit?"

"With her," sighed the old man, "I should have calculated on having quite three hundred pounds in the house."

"Very good; I offer you double that."

"The double of what?" mumbled Wentworth, who had not been listening.

And then, shaking his head in a hopeless sort of way:—

"Pray forgive me, my lord, but I really don't know what you are saying."

"I offer you six hundred pounds for your benefit, and Lucinda shall not play."

Andrew Wentworth was very greatly excited.

"Six hundred pounds," he cried; "my lord, I—I beg you ten thousand pardons; but we actors, as well as other people, have our dignity to maintain, and 'tis to the public only that we look for our support. They pay us to make them laugh and cry, and we endeavor to let them have their money's worth; if they are well pleased, they throw a few bravos into the bargain, and the account is squared. I should not feel humiliated in taking the sixpence paid by a workman for admission to the gallery; but the six hundred pounds that you would place in my hand—ah, pardon me, my lord, that isn't like money taken at the doors, and I should feel like a poor old beggar receiving charity—and so, excuse me, my lord, I won't have it—no, I won't, not a shilling of it."

"Mr. Wentworth, do but hear me!"

HARRY WESTON, Manager.

"No, my lord, no, I have heard quite enough. Never mind me, I shall have somebody in the house, I dare say, and if I should not why—why I can't help it, and must do the best I can, that't all. Only I never expected this from—but it doesn't matter, never mind, never mind!"

Thus muttering, the poor old man was walking from the room, when Lyttleton followed and detained him.

"My good friend,——" began his lordship

"I am not your friend," hastily interrupted Wentworth, pushing him away. Your friend indeed, who comes to take from us——"

"Think on what it is I offer her."

"Well! what?" cried Andrew. "What is it that you offer her? Diamonds? Shawls? Dresses? Carriages? Servants? Horses? Grooms? Footmen? Coachmen? Stables? Coach-houses? Chariots? Chaises? Gigs? Tandems? "Think on what it is I offer her."

"Ah!—and so I went round to the back—to the stage door, they told me it was, and I told a dreadful fib——"

"Ah, that's nothing!"

"I said that I had come to see Miss Mordaunt about some shoes that my Peter was making for her, and they let me pass directly, and then when I had got up here I saw an ugly old man with a book in his hand——"

"That was the prompter."

"I don't know what a prompter is, but I know he is a brute, for I had just got so far as please, sir, will you tell me—and then he told me to go to the ——, you know."

"Just like him," laughed Miss Fubbs.

Sophy." [illegible] all those fine dressed up men?" asked woman.

"What, all of them?"

"Yes, all of them."

"And who are those men lugging about the side of a house there, running about."

"Oh, they are the carpenters and scene shifters."

"But when can I go and see Miss Mordaunt acting away."

"Wait a bit, the act is almost over and she will be off the stage presently."

Just then Wentworth, dressed for a small character in the play, came hurrying that way.

"Oh!" he exclaimed, in a highly agitated state, "I am annihilated, dead."

"Bless me," thought Sophy, "he can't mean that—that's part of the acting I suppose!"

And Anna said to herself:—

"What's the matter with that stupid old man now, I wonder."

"Oh Lucinda, Lucinda," groaned Andrew.

"Has any accident happened to her?" cried Sophy, running to him.

"No," he responded, "I should have preferred that."

"What a horrid old brute!" thought Sophy.

"The unhappy girl's memory has failed, she has lost all her great points in the act, all of them," Wentworth despairingly exclaimed.

Whatever he could mean by points was a perfect mystery to poor Sophy. The act drop having descended, Lucy hurried towards her dressing-room and entered it without perceiving her sister, who had stood aside to let her pass. And she too was greatly agitated.

"It was he! I am sure of it," she murmured, as she threw herself into the chair placed before her toilet table.

"Lucinda! my dear child," tremblingly exclaimed Wentworth, following his pupil into her dressing-room.

"Ah," she sighed, "I have been acting very badly to-night, have I not?"

"Yes, you have indeed—whatever is the matter with you? Come now, tell me, my child?"

"Oh," impatiently she exclaimed, "you must have guessed that—Henry——"

"Lord Lyttleton!—what of him?"

"I have seen him again."

"Oh, confound him," thought Wentworth.

Already had Lucy felt greatly troubled without knowing wherefore. For some minutes a kind of presentiment had assailed her; she gazed again and again towards a box near the stage which had continued obstinately closed, and, in spite of herself, trembled lest she should see the curtains of that box withdrawn and find herself before Lord Lyttleton. Suddenly those curtains were thrown aside, and see him she did—yes, it was he! He smiled, but it was a bitter and almost threatening smile; it was not love he had in his eyes, and Lucy told herself it was madness! From that moment the actress had forgotten all the words of her part; she had no longer seen anything except her lover's eyes and smile.

"I never saw you in such a state, my child," said Wentworth; "over and over again the prompter gave you the word, but you appeared not to pay the least attention to him."

"For heaven's sake," cried Lucy, "what did I say? Did they hiss me?"

"Hiss you, hiss you," exclaimed Andrew, "why, what are you talking about now? Why, if they had done that I would have set fire to the theatre. No, no, they grumbled and muttered and whispered to one another, that was all—in the pit especially and in two or three private boxes."

In almost every theatre there are boxes constantly occupied by people who laugh always and at everything—boxes filled with fashionable, so called, ladies, who go to a theatre not to see, but to be seen. Those are women who trouble themselves little though they should kill the future of an artist, or the work of a poet, provided they attract attention to themselves—provided that on the morrow the talk of the town shall be concerning the freshness of their bouquets and the splendor of their diamonds. But the mockeries of such women as those should be despised. They are never seen to weep at a tragedy, nor smile at a comedy. No actor or actress should accept such people as judges; for they understand nothing, are quite without feeling—and, in short, utterly without heart.

"Lucy," proceeded Wentworth, "you may, if you please, repair all the mischief you have done, there is plenty of time for that."

"You think so?" said Lucy.

"Yes. True talent finds always a warm defender in the true public, and when taken with an enthusiastic fever the public observes nothing of the laughter and interruption buzzing in the ears, or, if it does hear, gets savage, and cries, 'turn 'em out!'—and very proper too."

Then, observing that Lucy had grown more calm, considerably better, and having his wits about him, for he was a very old stager, as we know, he said to the waiting woman:—

"Anna, run to the stage manager, and say that he is to inform the public that Miss Mordaunt is a little indisposed, and asks to be allowed a few minutes to recover herself."

Off ran Anna Fubbs.

"Why do you that?" asked Lucy.

"My love, let me alone, I know what I am about. You are not fit to appear again just yet, and the act-drop has already been down a long while. Hark," he whispered, holding up his finger.

They listened, heard the stage manager addressing the audience, and that his short speech was followed by a round of applause.

"There, my dear, when you go on in the fourth act the people will give you a tremendous reception, and you must act your very best to repay them for their kind sympathy."

"Yes, you are right; thanks," said Lucy.

At this instant the waiting woman returned, and with her was Lucy's sister. The actress, who was seated at her toilet and powdering her face, beckoned Sophy to her, and whispered:—

"Dear little Sophy, I did not expect to see you! How is it you are here?"

"I was free, and availed myself of the first opportunity to ——. But, mercy on us! what is that you are putting on your face?"

"I am making myself look pale, dear," smiled Lucy.

"Pale! but you were quite white enough before," returned Sophy.

And then, dropping her voice to a whisper:—

"Tell me, Lucy; have you any grief? any trouble?"

"Yes," sighed the actress.

"Tell me what it is."

"I cannot. Don't you know, my dear, that I am keeping the audience waiting."

"Well, let them wait, they see you every day and I don't."

"Well," cried Wentworth, who had been standing near the door, "are you ready now? Here is the call boy, to know if they may begin the act."

"In a moment," replied Lucy.

"I want to see you on the stage," said her sister.

Lucy instructed her waiting maid to take Mrs. Colston into the first entrance.

And as soon as those two were gone Andrew Wentworth said:—

"It's over now, isn't it? You will, I hope, try to forget——"

"Henry?—yes I will endeavor."

And, warming as he proceeded, Wentworth said:—

"Think, besides, that if you love him it is necessary, in the very interest of your love, that you should be sublime."

"How mean you?"

"People are not fond of an actress that is hissed by the public."

"How? do you believe that Lord Lyttleton——"

"His lordship is like all the rest; he is fond of your beauty and virtue, but your talent and your triumphs—those are what most of all he loves."

"If that were true?"

"Who knows that already, at this very moment, his heart is not cooling towards you—you understand? He may, perhaps, have heard some of the criticisms, some of the bantering remarks passed concerning you."

"You think that?" cried Lucy, starting to her feet. "Yes, yes, you are right, I must be applauded, I must. You shall see."

Wentworth chuckled to himself, for he had not spoken thus without a motive. Into the room came the prompter, saying in a great flutter:—

"I am going to ring up, Miss Mordaunt."

"I am ready, I am ready," she very agitatedly replied.

Away went the prompter, and Lucy then, addressing Wentworth, almost mildly, cried:—

"I am about to take my revenge; no longer fear for me, the cloud which obscured my thoughts is dissipated; the fever which devours and burns re-animates me. It is not now my part that I am about to repeat before the public; it is my entire soul that I am about to give it. I may die of it, but should it be my last I desire this evening a triumph more complete, more dazzling than all the others. Father, I am now sure of myself; either I am mad, or I shall be sublime!"

[illegible] hurried; and Wentworth, wiping his eyes, must suffer! Ah, [illegible] how she me!"

CHAPTER XVI.

A TRAGEDY BEFORE THE CURTAIN.

Anna Fubbs was of opinion that her mistress was very silly to be concerned because the audience were kept waiting for her half an hour or so. The waiting maid thought that if ever it should be her good fortune to become the idol of the public, the said public would have a very hard time of it. They should come to see her act, and then hear an announcement that she had been seized with a violent hoarseness, so that she might be a greater creature and made the more of when she did condescend to appear. These reflections passed through Anna's mind as she stood at the side of the stage watching her mistress, listening to the thunders of applause with which the great actress was received. Presently she felt a slight tug at her dress, and, turning, saw beside her one of Lucy's servants.

"How queer you look," Anna said to him; "what is the matter with you?"

"Just come this way, Anna, will you?—I have got something very particular to say to you."

They walked to the back of the stage.

"Now," laughed Anna, "let's hear, Johnson—what is this stupendous mystery?"

"But look there," said Johnson, pointing to some of the scene shifters who were seated a few yards away.

"Well, what of them?"

"If they should happen to hear me!"

"Nonsense!" They are too busy with their beer.

But Johnson drew the waiting maid a little farther from those men, and again looked carefully about, before saying to her in a half-whisper:—

"Oh, Anna, I am a great rascal!"

"I don't doubt it in the least," laughed the waiting woman.

"And I am full of remorse."

"Then you are an idiot as well as a rascal," said Anna, with great disdain.

"First of all I must give you these," continued Johnson, and placed in her hands a packet of letters.

"What are all these," enquired Anna.

"Letters," he replied, "that have been during the last few days addressed to Miss Mordaunt and that I have intercepted."

"What have you done that for?"

"I was paid to do it."

"How infamous!"

"I have received ten pounds."

"A great deal too little," said Anna; "I should have expected at least twice as much."

"Ah," groaned Johnson, "I have done very wrong."

"What, in accepting so small a sum? Well, I think you have."

"No, I mean, in——"

"Never mind that now, but be good enough to explain to me——"

"This is it, you know that the Russian baron was in a dreadful state of fury when he learned what Miss Mordaunt had done with the diamonds he had sent to her?"

"Yes, I know, laughed Anna, "she sent them to the baron's wife—a very good joke, no doubt, but one which certainly, if the diamonds had been given to me, I should not have practised."

"Well," proceeded Johnson, "Baron Tetsikoff swore to be avenged on Miss Mordaunt."

"Does he mean to kill her?"

"No, no."

"Well, I didn't know, those Russians are such savage bears."

He means to carry her off."

"Oh, if that is all, that's nothing."

"I'll tell you how it is to be done, and, though he is but a baron, a prince couldn't do things in a better style."

"Go on?"

"He has bought over Miss Mordaunt's carriage and horses, and coach

Lucy snatched back the letter from her sister's hand and read to the end of it, which ran as follows:—

"If I obtain no answer from you if you play again this evening, it will cause me to prefer the theatre to my home. I am [illegible] from you and then, Lucy, I shall never bear the stage for despair; I shall be in it for you a last time, and when I desire to step a crowd shall recall you I will say farewell to you and to the world."

"Oh!" cried Sophy, "that man ought to be put into a lunatic asylum."

And in a feverish paroxysm the actress exclaimed:—

"I know not if he be crazed, but assuredly he will drive me mad."

"What are you going to do?" asked Mrs. Colston.

"What do I" cried Lucy; "you ask me that? Oh, do I know, can I tell?"

The call boy just then knocked at the door of the actress' dressing-room, and told her that the fifth act had commenced. On to the stage dashed poor Lucy, with her eyes directed to the box in which she had before seen Lyttleton. But she saw him not now, for the curtains again were closely drawn; but occasionally they were shaken, and she knew that he still was there. It was not during the act that she had cause to fear the threatened catastrophe, and, besides, at whatever risk, the play must be finished. But she saw only that one closed box, all the rest of the house was dark to her; and the applause showered upon her, as she proceeded, sounded confusedly in her ears, and as if with a muffled, far away sound. She was almost unconscious of what she said and did in that terrible last act, but still she spoke and played, and filled her audience with rapture.

All was mechanical with her, even while the public declared that she had never before acted so divinely; that on that night she had surpassed herself. The curtain descended, the dreadful moment had arrived. Sophy, hearing the loud calls for the actress and not understanding their meaning, was greatly alarmed.

"What is the meaning of all this?" she cried. "Are all the people fighting one another?"

The shoutings increased, and Lucy, with a cry of agony, exclaimed:—

"Oh, they are calling for me! and it is at this moment that he threatens me with—"

"Come, come, my love," cried Wentworth, "why don't you come on?"

He knew nothing of that terrible letter. Lucy stood fixed as a statue, while still louder and more impatiently did the audience demand that their admired actress should re-appear before them to receive their congratulations.

"You must go on," exclaimed Wentworth.

"Yes, yes!" cried actors and actresses surrounding her, while the stage manager grasped her hand.

"No, no," despairingly cried Lucy. "I will not, cannot, must not!"

"Yes, yes, pray do, Miss Mordaunt," entreated the stage manager.

And all wondered and asked themselves whatever could be the matter with her that evening. Dragged and forced towards the curtain, which others were holding aside for her, Lucy cried appealingly to Andrew Wentworth:—

"Have pity on me—that letter—"

"What letter?"

"Henry—he—"

"To the devil with Henry," cried the old actor, "the public first of all."

The stage manager was already in sight of the audience holding Lucy's hand.

"Save me! release me!" with a last vain effort and with a half-mad cry, exclaimed Lucy.

The next moment she was on the stage, in full view of the audience. Frantically they applauded her, but she heard not; bouquets came showering down and fell at her feet, but she saw them not. Her eyes were fixed upon the curtains of that closed box, her ears strained, listening for that fatal sound she was expecting. And she had not long to wait. The curtains of that box were dashed aside, and she beheld, only for a moment, Lyttleton, whose eyes were sternly and reproachfully fixed upon her. Then she saw his arm raised and with a pistol in his hand. There was a loud report, a tumult of men's voices, the screams of women, but above all pealed Lucy's voice, as she wildly and despairingly shrieked:—

"They have killed him"—and fell senseless on the stage.

TO BE CONTINUED.

THE RING.

THE LIGHT WEIGHT MATCH.

The catch-weight match between Billy Edwards and Sam Collyer is the only event of importance at present visible on the pugilistic horizon, and it excites a large amount of attention from those who give their support to gladiatorial displays. From conversations held with those who are posted in ring matters and are fully conversant with the abilities of both men when in their best form, as likewise from what we have been able to glean from other sources, Collyer is the general favorite, many who have hitherto backed Edwards, and who now desire that he may prove the victor in the approaching combat, being impressed with the belief that in a battle fought upon the conditions of the one under consideration Sam will carry too many guns for Billy, and that superior endurance, and at least equal strength, will enable him to win the day. There are plenty of others, however, who firmly adhere to the cause of Edwards, and confidently assert that the same causes which operated to his advantage hitherto—finer science, and greater hitting powers—will secure him the victory when next he meets the Baltimorean. All this is of course conjecture, however, and we must await the arrival of the day to decide the question. On Saturday, 20th inst., the fourth deposit, of $100 a side, making in all $1,000 now in the hands of the temporary stakeholder, was posted at this office, Billy attending in person, fresh from his training quarters at Cypress Hill Grove, L. I., and Sam's share arriving per express. At this meeting the subject of a final stakeholder came up for settlement, and after the proposal of Jack Looney, of St. Louis, and Harry Hill, of this city, and Jim Mallouk, of Philadelphia, all of whom were objected to, the gentleman who filled that office upon the occasion of their previous match, [illegible] joint proprietor of the Flowery, was also appointed; upon [illegible] Johnny Courtney, naming Jack [illegible], and Edwards stating that his interests would be looked after by either Tom Allen or Billy Carlisle. The next and last deposit, $100 from the New Yorker, and $500 from Collyer, must be staked on Saturday, 27th inst., at this office, not later than 4 o'clock P. M. Both men are working assiduously to render their condition perfect, though Sam has not yet established himself permanently, but will do so at an early day, taking up his quarters in the vicinity of the Mound City. Edwards commenced work on the 16th inst., and during the past week took three gallops moderately, working off his surplus flesh gradually, preparatory to more strenuous exercise. We understand that Dooney calculates to bring him to the mark weighing about 124 pounds. The contest promises to be more stubborn and severe than either of those which have preceded it.

GALLAGHER VS. MERKIN.—The final deposit, $100 a side, in the match between these big 'uns, Jim Gallagher and Merkin, was staked at Hennessey's saloon, St. Louis, on the evening of Aug. 18th, a full house assembling to witness the ceremony. The battle is to be decided on the 30th, within fifty miles of St. Louis, and both men are reported to be in fine condition. A young fellow named Madden, claiming to be a nephew of "Ould Mike," was present, and offered to fight the winner, whereupon Tom Kelley jumped up and wanted to match Gallagher against him, win or lose, but Madden hadn't any "sugar" to post for a match, and that will doubtless be the end of it. Morris and O'Donnell are to do battle in the same ring, and 'tis not improbable that a third scrap will likewise take place therein, and Collins, the "C. I. M.," has issued a challenge, which Madden promptly accepted. Gallagher is to have an exhibition at Looney's New Academy Hall, Green street, between Fifth and Sixth, on the evening of August 27th. The match-up will be given by Gallagher and Tom Kelly, his trainer.

A CHARITABLE ENTERTAINMENT.—Harry Hill has tendered a complimentary benefit to the widow of the late lamented athlete, John Sheffield, which will take place at the commodious concert room attached to Harry's establishment on the afternoon of Monday next, Aug. 29th, commencing at 2 P. M.

JOHNNY FRANKLIN, the well known sporting man of New Orleans, died at the Galt House, Louisville, Ky., last week. We have not heard the particulars of his unexpected decease, which will be truly regretted by very many with whom he associated during life.

WE HAVE LETTERS for Sam Collyer, Bob Smith and J. W. Cozad.

BILLIARDS.

CONTEST FOR $250 A SIDE AT THE THREE BALL GAME.—At Capt. Boyle's on the night of the 16th, A. R. Samuells and an amateur contended for $250 a side at the three ball game. The number of points was 250, Mr. S. receiving the odds of 50. That gentleman desired to withdraw from the match at once, but subsequently decided that playing it was preferable to paying forfeit. The amateur was the favorite, but at one time it looked as though his antagonist would have an easy victory. Up to the 52d innings, each had scored 88, Samuels being thus 50 ahead. The amateur now did his best playing, scoring 36 points in six consecutive innings. This "burst of speed" enabled him to overcome the odds and win by 38 points additional. The winner's average was 1 1/4, 61.103-147, while his best runs were 21 and 16. Samuells' best run was 8.

GAMES IN PROVIDENCE.—On the afternoon of the 16th, a new room, "The Narragansett," was opened in Providence, R. I. Melvin Foster and Joseph Dion played a game of 500 points, which the latter won by 335, and might have won by more had he chosen to exert himself. The score is as[illegible]:—

Dion...5, 27, 6, 24, 246, 72, 0, 6, 12, 21, 0, 83. Total, 500. Average, 41 5-6.

Foster...0, 0, 3, 3, 30, 0, 3, 6, 9, 63, 27, 12. Total, 165. Average, 13 3-4.

In the evening, Dion had for his opponent Edward Daniels, of Boston. The playing was far superior to that done in the afternoon, even the loser averaging 49. The score shows two interesting "runs," all the more interesting because accomplished on a 9-pocket table.

DANIELS.—0, 27, 0, 6, 130, 10, 66, 35, 24, 146, 3, 103, 70, 6. Total, 630. Average, 45 4-14.

DION.—0, 21, 9, 6, 76, 3, 0, 65, 220, 5, 27, 105, 75, 127. Total, 1,000. Average, 71 6-14.

MOVEMENTS OF PLAYERS.—Philip Tieman has returned to Cincinnati.....M. H. Hewins, of Hartford, was in this city on the 19th.....The same day, Thomas Foley arrived from Chicago.....R. F. Ryall is at present in Easton, Penn.....Cyrille Dion had been for two weeks at Saratoga.....John McDevitt is at St. Paul, Minn., and contemplates opening a billiard room there.....John W. Coon has returned to Chicago, and is in charge at the Tremont House.....Peter Snyder is cashier of Miller's room, Chicago.....M. R. Hughes has returned to San Francisco.....A. W. Jamieson is in Cincinnati.

ANOTHER ROOM FOR NEW YORK.—Messrs. Phelan & Collender have received an order for nine Standard American tables for the Grand Central Hotel, in this city.

To Correspondents.

J. BEN, Philadelphia.—The omission of the score of the game in question between the Athletics and other clubs was certainly unintentional on our part, for it is our desire to place on the CLIPPER record scores of all games of importance, and as the Athletics hold a high position in base ball circles, we have ever been desirous of receiving and publishing reports of all games in which they participate. In a busy season like the present, with matches to be attended to here, and scores and reports from correspondents revised and frequently re-written, it is only a wonder that we miss so very few games. Did any of the gentlemen connected with the Athletics see proper to send us scores, if not reports, of their games, as members of other clubs do, then we would be free from complaint; but this the Athletics never do, we are sorry to say; they leave us to gather the facts as best we can from conflicting newspaper reports, but never from official sources. Scores of the games you mention will be found in another part of this issue; they having, for once, been sent to us from your city.

VINDICATOR, Warren, O.—Hoss loses his $100. The rule in racing is imperative that after the drum is tapped there can be no recall. We saw the race in question at Philadelphia in 1865, and, although the starting was an unfortunate affair, especially for the backers of the favorite, Captain Moore, yet the judges' decision, which gave the purse and bets to Zeb Ward's Billy, was unquestionably correct, according to racing rules. It was the fault of the jockeys, who, having heard the drum tapped, ought to have known that there could be no recall, even by the judges themselves.

J. J. B. ANDRUS, Oak.—By the new trotting rules, if the race was a mile heats, best two in three, a horse not winning one heat in three shall not start for the fourth heat. In a race of heats, best three in five, a horse not winning one heat in five shall go over for the sixth, unless said horse has made a dead heat. But where eight or more horses start, every horse not distanced shall have the right to compete until the race is concluded. Why do you not get the new Rules of Trotting? They were published in the CLIPPER several weeks ago.

A. F. D., Pittsburgh.—We do not answer such queries. For our opinion as to the merits of players read the reports in the CLIPPER. Philadelphia Mike Scribe is king pin, Cincinnati holds the same opinion of Brainard, Morrissania is all Charley Pabor, New York goes in for Wolters, the Amateurs of Brooklyn swear by Cummings, the Atlantics bet on the "Charmer," and Troy backs Joe Fisher. Cleveland thinks J. White the swiftest, Chicago that Burns is, and so it goes. It's all a mere matter of local opinion.

C. R., Georgetown, D. C.—Pool-selling is the putting up at auction the privilege of taking first choice of horse in a race, after this is sold to the highest bidder, then the privilege of second, third and fourth choice of horses, or as many as there are horses in the race, is then sold in the same way. The money which each brings is put up in the pool-seller's hands, and, less his commission, paid over to the purchaser of the winning horse.

SCRANTON.—1. "When Ned Searle made his famous jump of 15 ft. and 7 inches, did they measure from the toe where he started to the heel where he landed, or from heel to heel? 2. A, B, C and D played a game of euchre; A dealt, B and C passed, D ordered it up to prevent a loss hand. Had he (D) a right to order if he did not hold a trump?"..... 1. As we are not given to betting around "ladies' hotels" we cannot respond to your question.

HENRY JOHNSON, Troy, N. Y.—In dealing at Forty-five the cards [illegible] Two Kings was the winner of the yacht race at [illegible].

[illegible] Bets on a play or pay trot are off if the race does not come off.

E. C., Long Haven.—We have not seen Mace yet and consequently cannot inform you.

LAWYER.—Tests on glass can be purchased of H. & H. T. Anthony & Co., No. 501 Broadway, N. Y.

THIRTY-FOUR.—J. Wilkes Booth never played Richard II. at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, nor anywhere else.

OLD FOGY.—Two 2's, one 3, one tray and another 4 turned up count 17.

W. S., Phila.—Dexter made 2:17¾; Ethan Allen and running mate, 2:18.

R. H. SEARCH.—You are entitled to a shot for the $10 you have on the table.

J. L., Sudbury St., Boston.—The bet being play or pay, the backer of the horse forfeiting loses.

JOHN HALSPAR CARY, Philadelphia.—We do not answer such questions.

MACBETH.—You can dramatize the work of any American author, but may not use the copyrighted title.

H. F. NICHOLS.—Address a letter care of this office. We have no positive information of his whereabouts.

MRS. MARY CORSON, Utica, N. Y.—Address a letter to him in care of this office and it will reach him.

MARANATHA, Oswego.—The value of your play will depend entirely upon the success it meets with on representation.

J. C. AND M., Toronto.—The rule is to deal two or three cards to each, dealing to all alike, and not two to one and three to another.

UMPIRE.—Edwards and Collyer fought twice, Billy winning each time.

RED WING, Davenport, Iowa.—Not recorded.

"Fistiana." Read "Napoleon's Campaigns."

CHAS. C., Boston.—Send on a deposit to make your challenge good, and your address.

R. E. S., Boston.—The daily newspapers contain all the information received, and we cannot post you any further.

CHARLES.—We cannot give names, but that distance has been beaten.

D. B. D., Kent, O.—1. Palmer rode Judge Curtis for the American Club Purse. 2. They are equally as good.

READER, Boston.—It is not obligatory on C to drive the horse himself.

SOAP MIXER, Watertown.—Of course A can raise B after seeing his bet.

W. H., Buffalo.—If the horse had won the heat before your bet, it is your loss.

J. W. A., Paterson.—1. No vessel has ever done it. 2. Three aces beat 17 in rattles.

W. C., Dundee, Scotland.—Except for matter of a sporting or theatrical nature, we do not care to publish your letter.

ANGEL.—Your angelic poetic contribution has been unavoidably crowded into the waste paper basket.

J. T., Boston.—Communicate with Ed. James, as per advertisement in another column.

J. F., Boston, Mass.—No; he spilled stroke car. A. Burnham was the coxswain.

SECRETARY OF JUNIOR B. B. ASSOCIATION.—A letter at this office for you.

W. F. L.—The Wards won in 1867 and the St. John's men in 1868. They were different crews.

P. G., Rensselaer.—We do not act as purchasing agents. Write to Ed. James, as per advertisement.

ELKTON, Cecil Co., Md.—The judges' decision was right, for B's driving, according to your statement, was palpably foul.

ENGLISHMAN, Jersey City.—There are three aces in throwing rattles. Aces are the lowest combination on the dice.

S. J., New York.—We never heard of the article in question, nor can we on inquiry learn anything about them.

JOHN SPIRE, New Haven.—Your adversary had no right to go alone against you, and the euchre merely gives him two points.

DASHER, Carlinville.—We do not need one at that place, thank you.

W. A., Pacific House, Omaha.—1. Four sixes and a deuce beat four sixes and an ace. 2. Four sixes beat four aces.

J. C., Fort Pike, Ga.—Your opponent is wrong; he can build on the cards in the manner you describe.

H. S. AND J. L., Columbia.—Izzy Lazarus and Joe Coburn never fought together, either in a prize ring or any where else.

SUBSCRIBER, Utica.—A straight beats two pairs.

GYMNASTICUS.—See answer to J. F. M., Troy.

H. W. WOODRUFF, Kidder, Mo.—See answer to J. T.

P. C., Salem.—We do not know any cure remedy for the purpose.

H. B. PONTIAC.—A huge boulder, but "very like a whale."

CORBAND, Ogden, Utah.—We have no record of such an event.

G. G. G.—Apply to the secretary of the club.

TOMMY DODD, Providence, Mass.—No record of time at 80 yards.

PROTECTION.—Neither. It's a game of chance, turning partly on skill.

HARRY HANSCOM, The Stage.—1. Yes, in practice games.

G. L., Franklin, Iowa.—Read the CLIPPER.

A SUBSCRIBER, Philadelphia.—Neither, of course.

MAX, Cincinnati.—Both are good.

CHICAGO.—See answer to A. P. D.

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—We are unable to understand your question.

F. M., Titusville, Pa.—See answer to "Clipper Shark."

S. L., Baltimore.—Call at 129 Bank Street, Collyer.

WESTFIELD.—They fought at catch-weight.

A YOUNG AMERICA.—We do not care for secrets.

J. B. O., Brooklyn.—1. We cannot throw a fly. 2. Ed. Russell.

RAILROAD, Rome.—Send your question again in full.

CHESTER, Phila.—Neither.

DOUBTFUL.—The ball played with is the trophy.

F. T.—See answer to F. J. M., Jr.

EXCITING FOOT RACE.

The year 1870 will long be remembered as witnessing some of the most interesting sporting events in the history of the human family, the old world and the new alike taking part in the various pastimes, and furnishing the sinews and muscle wherewith to bring them to a successful finale; but no event has created such deep and wide spread interest as the pedestrian match between those royal old sports, Billy King of Prussia, and Lewy Nap, of France. The match was first broached in July, and after the publication of various cards, as is the custom with peds, before committing themselves too far, articles of agreement were at length signed, and the men at once put themselves in training for the important pedalic contest, the first under the skilful and experienced care of the well-known trainer Bismarck, and the latter under the guidance of that out-and-outer MacMahon, both of whom have rubbed down some of the best men in European circles. The stake at issue is a very heavy one, the Imperial crown of France against the kingly throne at B[illegible] sia. These long distance runners dispute the Frenchas to where the race should take[illegible] characteristic manner, that the start should take [illegible] stingen on the Rhine," and the course be from that point to Berlin, taking in Mayence, Frankfort, Meningen, Weimer, etc., stopping at each place for repairs and refreshments. This would make a very pleasant route, and would give the worthy old burghers of that section of country a chance to see the sport without losing much time or being put to unnecessary expense. But the Prussian, not to be outdone in politeness, even by a Frenchman, respectfully declined the proffered courtesy of Nap, and proposed that, as the latter had been the prime mover and promoter of all pugilistic and pedestrian exercises, and had kept the sport alive by his individual exertion, and the co-operation of the sport-loving people of France, it was proper that the route of the race should embrace a line leading from the Rhine, thence along the banks of the blue Moselle, passing Saarbrucken, Weissenberg, Metz, Chalons, and so on to Paris. Points of difference like these between sporting characters noted for honor and politeness, are never very easily adjusted, the interposition of a new element being necessary to decide the mooted question; it was finally settled that the contending parties should meet on the Rhine, and toss up a copper for choice of track. This was accordingly done, and the Prussian won, choosing the route to Paris we have just mentioned, and giving his friendly competitor six days' notice of the fixture. Chagrined that the mere toss up of a cent should give the worthy William the prestige of politeness greater than that possessed by himself, Louis very thoughtfully suggested that, as he, Louis, knew that route so much better than the Prussian, it would be taking a mean advantage of the latter to accept such generous terms. But this was combatted by William's trainer, Bismarck, who proposed that, as the Frenchman would not take such advantage, a compromise could be effected, which would be favorable to both, and at the same time place them on an equal footing. To this end, his proposed that, owing to his superior knowledge of the route and the greater length of time he had been training for this friendly race, the Frenchman should proceed backward, while the novice might make progress by a forward movement. This was approved of by all interested, and at the appointed time the friendly competitors for pedestrian honors met at the starting post on the Rhine, each with his trainer and backers. Billy looked in the very perfection of health; his eye was bright, and shone with a lustre equal to Jim Fisk's favorite brilliant; his countenance was calm, yet exhibited evidence of a confidence in his ability to pull through successfully. Bismarck eyed him as a hungry man eyes the waiter who is bringing him a plate of pork and beans; he seemed to be proud of his handiwork, and pointed to him with pride and satisfaction. Lewy's condition was not so flattering; his eye was dull, and there was a careworn expression on his face which denoted that he had been overtrained, leaving him weak and spiritless. The start was effected at the discharge of a cannon, and both got away together, cheered and encouraged by their friends. Being on Prussian territory for the first part of the race, Billy courteously permitted his adversary to take the lead, which he managed to retain until Saarbrucken was reached, the Frenchmen cheering wildly at the opening success of their man up to this point. Here each man was rubbed down and otherwise refreshed, after which the race was renewed. Just before reaching Weissenburg the Prussian, who had been strengthened by a dose of bitters given him at Saarbrucken, made a spurt, and the contest became intensely interesting; MacMahon urged his man forward by every means at his command, sponging him, throwing cold water on him and giving him appropriate doses of French brandy, but he had somewhat wasted his energies at Saarbruck, and, amid the triumphant shouts of his backers, Billy scooped him in at Weissenburg, where another halt for restauratives was made. Nap. looked rather the worse for the pace he had traveled, and it was feared that he had injured his backbone, but after the prescribed rest and medicines he came up smiling, for now he was on his native soil and the hearts of his backers were made glad. Billy, comparatively fresh, was fit to run for a man's life. Nap, it must be admitted, labored under considerable difficulty in his back-action movement, and this retrograde style of going forward was beginning to tell on him; but still he exhibited nerve and strained every muscle. Billy had tried his man, and having seen that he could out-foot him, bided his time and kept on at a moderate gait until Metz, a sort of half way house, loomed in sight; here commenced another of those desperate struggles for the lead, but Lewy made several of the most extraordinary backward running spurts it has ever been our fortune to [illegible] ing the best time on record between [illegible] while they, astonished [illegible] power of his swift gliding [illegible] ing, while Lewy was [illegible] around on the rear of their [illegible] precedence of the adversary; but Billy had [illegible] chickens before they were hatched, for, when he got on their side of Metz, Nap. was just emerging, fully prepared for another series of spurts. Both nerved the selves for the task before them, and at this point occurred several of the most exciting "trials of speed" ever witnessed outside of our agricultural exhibitions. Now Nap. ahead, now Billy; and so hard pressed was the former that once or twice he thoughtlessly gave up his back-action gait and pushed forward in the natural way; but Billy hung on to his quarters like a Dutchman to a piece of Limburger cheese, and so bothered the Frenchman by the celerity of his movements as to cause him to get out of temper, and curse MacMahon for getting him in such a fix. Struggle as he might, Nap. was unable to hold his own or keep the pace necessary to carry him into Paris a winner, for the Prussian's superior condition and long and powerful stride gave him an advantage over his adversary, whose weakness was now painfully apparent to the most casual observer. Still the merciless William pushed him to the top of his bent, and made it very tight papers for Prenchy, who stopped at Verdun long enough to have his mouth sponged out, and a strengthening plaster placed on his chest, which were most opportune temporary invigorators, and thus kept him on his pins. William, although considerably jarred and bruised by the uneven and rugged road, planted down his feet with an energy like unto the footsteps of Horace Greeley, and when our reporter left the race, in order to send this report to the CLIPPER, the chances were that the turning point in the contest would take place at Chalons, Nap.'s training quarters, where a large party of his friends were awaiting his arrival, and whose presence and encouraging words, it was thought, might enable him to continue the struggle for a while longer; William's extraordinary endurance, in the face of so many obstacles on the road, is, certainly, a great card for his trainer, Bismarck, who got him in such splendid fettle. In case Nap. should feel strong enough to continue the race to Paris, the closing part of the contest will be witnessed by throngs of individuals, who take interest in these exhilarating sports, and who will be anxious to be in "at the death." Further particulars in our next.

THE OVERWHELMING DEFEAT for the Athletics, in Philadelphia, by the Mutual Base Ball Club, of New York, has created much "talk" in the two cities, many persons boldly pronouncing it a "fixed thing." As we have seen no evidence in support of the allegation, we can only refer to it as one of the topics of the day in ball circles. Should the Mutuals be defeated in what is called the "second game"—which, the growlers assert, is "on the slate"—then a third game will be necessary, and probably the best men will win in the end. We shall soon be able to see "how the cat jumps."

A STEAMBOAT engaged in the oyster trade came near being blowed up recently by a derangement in her safety valve. Vessels of this sort, when they go hunting bivalves, should secure their safety by valves that have been properly tested. This is rather far-fetched, but then some allowance must be made when it is stated that it was made under a thermometrical high pressure.

LYING-IN WEIGHT!—The aristocrats of a new born infant. "Our Jim" says he was lying in state one night to murder a street walker of a cat, when a Dutch grocer let fly a weight at him, supposing him to be a burglarious interloper. James goes after profligate cats no more.

A YOUNG CRAB had an eye put out by a base ball a short time ago in one of the western circuits. "Our Jim" wonders if it has injured his looks much. Jim only takes a one-sided view of such things.

NOW IS THE TIME to buy your furs. Nothing will set off a lady so nicely as a set of furs; so she who defers making a purchase until cold weather shall set in will have to fur-nish a higher price for the article.

"OUR JIM" has had a suitable present of a puncheon of rum, and now the boy has rum punch (e) on hand at all times.

THE BONAPARTE FAMILY are making preparations for an exodus from France into "the country," for recreation and rest.

IT IS SAID that every tar in the Prussian navy is anxiously awaiting an opportunity to pitch in.

HITCHCOCK, Ethan Allen—Major-General of Volunteers; he graduated at West Point, Ga., in the class of 1817, and became an officer of the Academy in 1824, which connection he continued for about nine years. He had charge of the Northwest Indian Department for a few years, beginning in 1837. He also did active service in the Florida and Mexican wars, in the latter was a member of General Scott's staff. At one time he was in command of the Pacific division, and resigned his commission in Kansas. On the breaking out of the rebellion he became a Major-General of volunteers, but did not take any very active part in the conflict. He was, however, much on duty at Washington, and was a military adviser as well as a strong personal friend of President Lincoln. He held a prominent part in the war he acted as commissioner for exchanging prisoners. After his resignation he devoted himself to literary pursuits and philosophical researches. Among the works which he published were "Remarks upon Alchemy and the Alchemists," 1857, "Swedenborg an Hermetic Philosopher," 1858, and "Christ the Spirit," two volumes, 1859. Besides these there are other works from his pen which attracted considerable notice at the time—Hancock, Georgia, Aug. 8th, aged 72.

He was born in Rhode Island, on the 4th of August, 1795, his father having been a revolutionary soldier in 1776, when but a boy of sixteen years, he came to New York. For some time he kept a school in William street, but afterwards opened a clothing store in Cherry street, and later in Maiden lane. As a merchant he was very successful. Mr. Hoxie was a life long whig, and, after some years of prominence in political life, first appeared as a candidate for office in 1837, when he was elected clerk of Kings county. During the presidential campaign which ended in the election of General Harrison, he was conspicuous for his advocacy of their claims, and became quite popular as an orator. Henry Clay, with whom he was on the most intimate personal terms for many years, and that statesman's death, also received an enthusiastic support from him. Mr. Hoxie ran for Congress in 1852, but was beaten by Mr. Tweed. Before that time, and later, he ran several times for Congress, but was always defeated, his party being always in the minority. After the dissolution of the whig party he joined the republicans, and in 1864 President Lincoln appointed him Collector of Internal Revenue in the Fifth district. Many years have passed since he retired from mercantile pursuits. Of late his attention has been directed to fire and life insurance. He aided in establishing the Commonwealth Fire Insurance Company, and in 1858 was elected president of the Amicable Life, a position he held at the time of his death—Westerly, R. I., August 18th, aged 75.

FOREST CITY vs. ATHLETIC.

SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
ATHLETIC B. B. GROUNDS,
PHILADELPHIA, August 22d, 7 P. M.

An immense crowd of spectators, numbering between five and six thousand, were present this afternoon to witness the second match of a series between the Forest City Club, of Cleveland, and the Athletics, of this city. Nearly an hour was spent in trying to agree on an umpire, the Forest Citys insisting on John Wilder, of New York, but the Athletics would not hear of this, naming Bomeisler, Halbach and others. Mr. Halbach was finally agreed upon, and the Athletics having won the toss, the game commenced with the Forest Citys at the bat.

First Innings.—White, first striker, out at first by Radcliff to Fisler; Ward out in same manner; Pratt closed the innings by fouling out to Malone. No runs. ... Reach made a second on a high hit to right, and McBride third on a fine hit to right centre. Malone, Fisler and Sensenderfer secured their bases on errors. Berry was put out on a foul. Radcliff was missed on the fly by Sutton; Fisler was forced out at third; Sensenderfer forced Heubel home on an over throw to third, and Radcliff on Bechtel's hit to short left field. Pratt sent Bechtel home and Reach was put out at first. Six runs.

2. Sutton was put out at first by Reach's throw to Fisler; Carleton put on by Radcliff; Allison got to first by a good hit and scored on wild pitch, Kimball to first and Allison home. Heubel brought Kimball home by a hit to centre, E. White going to second and Heubel to first. White out on foul tip by Malone; 3 runs. ... While pitching and E. White catching, McBride struck out; Fisler was put out at first, Sensenderfer ditto, and Malone left, after getting first on called balls. No runs.

3. Ward got to first by a muff of Radcliff; Pratt brought Ward home and made 2d by a sharp hit; Sutton to 1st and Pratt home; Carleton got to second and Sutton home; Allison brought Carleton home and made his second on a grounder to right; Kimball out by a throw of Radcliff to Fisler; E. White out on the fly to Radcliff. Heubel forced out at 3d by White's hit to Radcliff. Five runs. ... Berry made 1st base; Radcliff ditto; Bechtel caught out on an easy fly by Sutton; Pratt brought Radcliff and Berry home on a high hit to right and got home on a passed ball; McBride put out at first by Ward, and Malone on a throw of J. White to Carleton. Three runs, the score standing Forest City, 8; Athletic, 2.

4. E. White out on a foul bound by Malone, and J. White by a beautiful running jump and throw by Radcliff to Fisler. Ward closed the innings by a fly to Sensenderfer. No runs. ... Fisler put on a fly to Pratt, and Sensenderfer at first by Kimball and Carleton. Berry got first on a high hit over second. Radcliff made his first by a liner over short and was forced out by Bechtel's hit to second. No runs.

5. Pratt got to first on a good hit, but was forced out at second by Sutton's hit to Radcliff; Carleton went out on strike; Allison out at first by a second throw of Radcliff. No runs. ... Bechtel led off with a high one to left and was caught; Pratt out on foul bound; Reach got to first on called balls; McBride out on high foul to Sutton. No runs. Great excitement.

6. Kimball out on the fly by McBride; Heubel made first by a hit to second and was forced out by E. White's hit to Reach, and Ward was beautifully caught on the fly by Sensenderfer, running back for it. No runs. ... Malone got to third by a beauty over Sensenderfer's head, and home on Fisler's hit to left; Sensenderfer got his first on a good hit; Berry out at first and Fisler home; Radcliff got out by a good throw of Sutton to first; Bechtel out on a foul tip by Sutton. Two runs.

7. Ward out on a foul bound by Malone. Pratt followed suit, and Sutton took first by a grounder over second. Carleton brought Sutton home and got to third by a magnificent hit to left. Allison put out by a high fly to Reach. One run. ... Pratt made third by a muff of Allison; Reach got to first and Pratt home. McBride reached second and Reach home. Malone got to first on a good hit; Fisler, by a hit to 1st, inside first base, brought both home and made second; Sensenderfer sent Fisler home. Berry got to first on a good hit; Radcliffe out on a high fly to centre; Bechtel forced Berry out and Pratt's hit forced Bechtel out and closed the innings for 3 runs.

8. Kimball got to first on a good hit, and Heubel went out on strikes. E. White put out on a foul bound by Pratt; J. White brought Kimball home by a long hit to left, making a home run himself; Ward out on a fly to Bechtel. Two runs. ... Pratt put out at first by Ward and Carleton; Reach got to second on a good hit; McBride out on the fly by J. White; Malone got to second on a good hit, Reach getting home. Fisler and Sensenderfer, after making base on good hits, were left by Berry going out at first by good fielding of Ward to Carleton. Two runs.

9. Pratt made second by a high hit over left, Sutton got to first on a good hit; Carleton out on strikes and Allison on a fly taken by Reach. Kimball was put out by McBride and Fisler. No runs. Radcliff struck out, Bechtel went out on a bound, taken by White; Pratt fouled out to E. White. No runs. The score:—

UNION vs. ATLANTIC.

On Monday afternoon of the 26th, our day for going to press, the Unions, of Morrisania, played the first game of a series for the championship with the Atlantics, on the Capitoline grounds. The manner in which the easiest catches were muffed by both clubs was childish in the extreme, and, in fact, the game looked anything but a genuine one. The following score will tell its own tale:—

MUTUAL vs. ATHLETIC.

The second game played between these clubs, the first of which was won by the Athletics, in Philadelphia, on the 4th of July, by a score of 24 to 15, took place on Aug. 18th, on the Athletic ground, the result being the signal defeat of the Athletics, by a score of 21 to 8. If this contest was the "first of a series," as we see stated, the game of July 4th must have been a practice game, but no mention of the fact was made before the day of play that it was to be so. We thought the Athletic Club, like other professional organizations, had been taught the folly of this gate money system of playing matches. Practice games will do for April or May to start the game, but afterwards they amount to nothing and are unworthy the attention of first class clubs. This defeat is the fifth sustained by the Athletics this season, and their over-confidence has been the cause of at least three of them. In this game the playing on the part of the Mutuals, both at the bat and in the field, was excellent, scarcely any muffs being accorded to them, except in the fifth innings. Egrier at centre field, and Patterson at left field, took everything which came in their way. C. Mills played beautifully behind the bat. Berry, on the part of the Athletics, was the only man who batted safely. The only player who did well in the field, without any shining, was Pratt at third base. McBride's pitching did not appear to be up to its usual standard and he was knocked all over the field. A fine double play was made by Reach and Fisler in the third innings, putting out Patterson and Egrier. The appended score tells the "Tale of Two Cities":—

ALLEGHENY vs. ATLANTIC.

The second game of the series between the above Pittsburgh clubs, the first of which was won by the Atlantics by a score of 25 to 22, was contested at Union Park, Allegheny, on the 19th inst., resulting in the well-earned triumph of the Alleghenians by the score underneath. A correspondent speaks as follows concerning the play:—"Graflin did some fine playing; he succeeded in taking a ball 'red hot' from the bat, and passing it to first base made a fine double play. Nevin made the best score. He has every requisite for a first-class player, being a good and sure hitter, sure catcher, swift runner and a strong thrower, excelling Hatfield in that line. Galligher never misses, and stands the swift pitching of McCall very well. The Allegheny now have a fine pitcher in McCall, being about the best in this section of the country. Drummond, Hilliard and Archibald, of the Atlantics, did the best playing on their side. Brosey did not play as well as he is capable of, but is not as effective as McCall." The following is the score:—

FOREST CITY vs. STAR OF BROOKLYN.

THE DEFEAT OF THE CHAMPION AMATEURS.

Probably no game of the series played by the Forest City nine in the metropolis during their last week's visit attracted more interest than their meeting with the amateur Stars, the expectation being general that the gentlemanly visitors would be defeated. The attendance was larger than at any Star match since June last. The Stars presented a new nine, with a new catcher and a different player at third base. In view of the ambitious career of this young pitcher to stand in opposition, as new catcher became a necessity, as Jewell, though he has played finely in the position, was regarded by the nine as a bar to their success, and as Captain did not command the confidence necessary for the position. By good fortune, Hicks, the late catcher of the Washington Nationals, became disengaged in July, and the Stars got him to join them, and at the Forest City club are not in the Association, they placed him behind in this game, in order to allow their pitcher full swing in his pace. Of course, the advent of Hicks added interest to the match, and hence the increase in the attendance. On the Forest City's side Pratt went in to pitch and Jas. White to catch, and so both sides presented their full strength, though the absence of Manly in his position, as third base player on the Star nine was generally commented upon as an error of judgment, and a weakening of an important position.

The game was commenced at 4 P. M., with the Forest City nine at the bat, and at once a regular old fashioned display of swift pitching marked the contest, the manner in which the Blue Stockings retired from failures to hit the ball reminding us forcibly of the days of Creighton's play in 1860, when the same style of thing used to be seen when he and Leggett faced each other in the Excelsior nine. But one man—Pratt—of the five who went to the bat in the first innings could hit the ball fairly, four of them striking three times, two running to first and two being put out, both the runs scored being obtained after getting first on three strikes. Cummings went in entirely for speed and showed less judgment in his delivery than in any previous game of the season, he depending solely on his pace. In this he was in a measure successful, the Blue Stockings batting with very little skill in the first three innings. In the fourth, however, they began to be more careful, and then had little difficulty in batting the fast pitching. In these innings nine men were put out on three strikes, half of the Blues batting very carelessly and altogether with too great an effort of force in wielding the bat, for in batting against swift pitching a quick style of wrist play is the only style effective. On the other side the Stars failed entirely in their efforts to punish the swift balls sent in by Pratt, and as Jas. White was more effective in stopping the hot ones from the pitcher than Hicks was, well as the latter caught, of course Pratt's facers were less costly. Hicks' throwing to bases, from which considerable was expected, did not prove as profitable as expected, as the base players found it difficult to hold the balls he threw to them, so great was the speed with which they were sent. One ball he threw drove Beavan's nail on his finger right through the flesh and he had to retire from the game, and, though Manly was on the field, instead of putting Clyne at 2d and Manly on 3d, they put on a sick man at centre field—who made a good catch, however—and sent Worth to second base, who also did effective service in the position. The loss of Beavans was certainly not felt at second in this game, though at the bat he was missed. The close of the fourth innings saw the totals at 7 to 5 in favor of the Blue Stockings, but by the close of the seventh innings the Stars had managed to pull up to an even score of 7 to 7, Jewell's fine base running helping them to two runs. By an error of the umpire's in deciding the ball picked up by Rogers on the bound close to the ground to be a fly catch, the Blues were put out for a flunk on a double play. They bore the mishap like gentlemen. In fact, during the whole week not a single dispute of the umpire's decisions was heard from them, their deportment throughout being highly creditable. In the last inning they again got the range of Cummings' pitching, and they punished him for two runs, and afterwards withstanding the Stars they came in the victors by a score of 9 to 7. This game is not the only one this season in which the Stars have shown their inability to bat skilfully. With a rubber ball, and in heavy hitting, they equal the best in the country, but, for display at the bat, such as Pearce, of the Atlantics, marks his batting with, they are lamentably deficient. They have an insane penchant for home runs, and cannot bring themselves down to the point of batting safely for the base only. Probably two or three more such defeats as that of the Pastime, Harvard and Forest City games will teach them the importance of going in for safe hitting instead of always striving for "corkers" to the out field. The umpire was altogether too lax in calling balls, and otherwise in regard to strikes. Whenever the ball curves in close to the batsman or curves out beyond the reach of his bat a ball should be called, which was not done in this game.

After the game was over the Blue Stockings were the recipients of several boquets from lady friends, and they well merited the favors bestowed not only by their fine play, but for their quiet, gentlemanly conduct throughout the whole of the exciting game. This was the last match Jewell will play in as a member of the Stars, he having resigned from the club. He will rejoin his old club, the Excelsiors, where, no doubt, the deep interest he takes in the club he belongs to, and his faithful service will be better appreciated. This was the seventh game the Stars have lost this season. We give the score below:—

FLY AWAY vs UNION STARS.

A REMARKABLE GAME.

On Thursday, August 18th, the most interesting and closest junior game of the season was played between the Fly Aways and Union Stars at Hunter's Point, L. I., on the Fly Away Ground, which resulted in the victory of the Fly Away Ground, which resulted in the victory of the former, after eleven innings, by a score of 16 to 14. To say that the play was excellent would convey but a faint idea of the beauties there displayed. The absence of Bostick, Wadsworth, and Waterman from the Fly Aways was noticeable. The pitching of Bowles, of the Union Stars, was the feature of their play. Lannigan caught well, and Paterson did great execution on second. Of the Fly Aways, Cassy excelled on second base, catching seven flys and hot liners. Gilligan caught well, and Baringer never pitched better. The Fly Aways led until the fifth innings, from which time the game became most exciting, by reason of its closeness. The Stars were confident of their ultimate success, when, in the ninth innings, they were three ahead, but the Flys made three also, and the innings closed with a tie at 14. The excitement waxed most intense when the tenth innings developed naught but a goose egg for either party. The eleventh innings sent the Stars to Chicago, and the Flys, by tremendous batting, clear over fielders' heads, scored two, closing the game. Mr. Standly, the umpire, deserves special mention, by reason of his sharp decisions in the most exciting moments. We append the score:—

ATHLETIC vs. CRICKETERS.

The regular Athletic nine of Philadelphia played a game with a nine selected from the Germantown and Young America Cricket Clubs at Philadelphia on the 20th inst., during which the cricket boys were punished considerably, only getting 3 runs, although they made 17 strikers. ... Rudolph, of Germantown, was the first striker for the cricketers, and Meacham, of Young America, opened the head in that respect, closely followed by Pratt and Radcliff, Rudolph and Radcliff played magnificently in their respective positions. Dan Newhall played brilliantly at short stop for the cricketers, making some superb stops, and throwing finely to the first base, assisting no less than ten times in putting out players. Bastall and A. Henry also played excellently at first and second bases. The batting of the cricketers was very safe, Dan Newhall taking the lead. The game was creditably umpired by Bob Roach, of the Olympics, of Washington. The following is the score:—

for the two cups—one for schooners and one for sloops—presented by Mr. James Ashbury, which took place on Tuesday, Aug. 16th. The New York Yacht Club also offered a cup to the schooner which should arrive second. For this event there were thirteen schooners and four sloops entered, and the race was to be sailed in accordance with the rules and regulations of the New York Yacht Club, giving time allowance. The course selected was from a line between Fort Adams and the Dumpling, to and around the buoy off Block Island, flying start, and the judges were Lewis M. Rutherford, H. J. Stebbins and Shepherd Homans. The names, tonnage, etc., of the vessels entered appear in the following list:—

SCHOONERS. Name.	Entered by.	Tonnage.
Cambria	James Ashbury	227.6
Phantom	H. G. Stebbins and C. H. Stebbins	123.3
Madgie	R. P. Loper	132.2
Tidal Wave	William Voorhis	153.5
Ida Celeste	Jacob Voorhis	160.0
Rambler	Thomas C. Durant	133.5
Idler	Franklin Osgood	97.3
Magic	R. Stuyvesant	194.2
Alice	S. W. Kidd	83.5
Calypso	A. S. Hatch	190.7
Haleyon	J. R. Smith	121.0
Alarm	A. C. Kingsland	226.3
Gracie	H. W. Johnson and William Krebs	84.5
Elaine	G. E. Duries	87.9
Eddie V	W. H. Langley	44.0
White Cap	L. Livingston	17.5

The yachts were all to cross the line within twenty minutes after the signal, which was given shortly after 11 o'clock, the yachts getting off as follows:—

Elaine	12h.	16m.	30s.	Magic	12h.	24m.	10s.
White Cap	12	18	30	Calypso	12	26	23
Tidal Wave	12	19	35	Alice	12	29	10
Halcyon	12	21	41	Madeleine	12	31	06
Eddie V	12	23	06	Madgie	12	34	35
Alarm	12	22	37	Phantom	12	36	35
Palmer	12	22	43	Idler	12	37	11
Gracie	12	23	00	Rambler	12	41	09
Cambria	12	23	24

Of course, in the contest between the schooners was centred the great interest, consequent upon the presence of the Cambria. There was about an eight-knot breeze blowing at the start, and the yachts, with the wind dead ahead, worked out through the Narrows by short tacks, with everything drawing, and presented one of the most animated and brilliant spectacles conceivable. The Cambria stood well in under the shore, and did not go about till close on to Kettle Bottom Rock, about a mile from the starting point, while the others made more boards and apparently less headway. The Cambria stood on the port tack from Kettle Bottom to Brenton's Neck, crossing the bow of the Palmer, the latter being on the starboard tack, and leaving the Alarm far astern. When the Cambria tacked off towards Brenton's Neck, the Palmer followed suit immediately, and the two crack schooners, with no more than a dozen lengths between them, stood off together on the starboard tack, with everything drawing alow and aloft. It was expected that the contest between them would prove close and exciting, but before they had sailed two miles it became apparent that the Cambria was outpointing and outsailing the Palmer, and that the latter had met more than her match. Seeing this the Palmer broke tacks, and stood off on the short tack, while the Cambria went on to pick up the Tidal Wave, which had not maintained the advantage held at the start. Before reaching Narragansett Pier, the Tidal Wave also had had enough of the Cambria, and she too separated from the Englishman, and went to look for a streak of luck, thus momentarily escaping the humiliation of seeing the Cambria cross her bows.

THE MAGIC AND THE CAMBRIA.

In the meantime, the little Magic, which had been hugging the northern shore pretty closely, and crept up almost unnoticed into a commanding position, and when the Cambria stood off the shore from Narragansett pier, she (the Magic) was close in her wake and a trifle to the windward. The breeze had freshened somewhat by this time, so that the leading yachts were going through the water at the rate of ten knots an hour. Both the Cambria and the Magic stood well out before tacking again, and when at last they did go about, the Magic had the windward gauge and was nearly ahead. But the Cambria hung on like grim death to her like a very shadow, and would not be shaken off. After passing Point Judith and taking the port tack, the two yachts did not go about again until they had made sufficient offing to weather the stake-boat stationed off the northwest point of Block Island. The Magic was about three and one-half miles from the boat when she made the tack, and the Cambria was half a mile astern of her. She tacked when the Magic did, however, trusting to favoring fawns to enable her to reach the stake without again going about, and she was not disappointed. By this little manœuvre the Cambria stole something of a march on the Magic, and when the latter rounded the Edgar Stuart and squared away for home, the Cambria was only two minutes and two seconds behind, as will be seen by the following table:—

Magic	4	09	09	Palmer	4	34	30
Cambria	4	09	09	Phantom	4	34	30
Elaine	4	11	15	Madgie	4	47	00
Gracie	4	27	15	Idler	4	48	30
Tidal Wave	4	34	10	Alice	4	48	00
Eddie V	4	27	30	Madeline	4	52	15

After passing the stake-boat the Magic run up her squaresail and jib topsail, and, with her jib boomed out, she sped off before the wind wing-and-wing at a tremendous rate. The Cambria added a topmast staysail to the expanse of canvas and followed close on the heels of her antagonist, honorably keeping off sufficiently not to take the wind from the Magic's sails. The breeze was now up to a twelve knot standard. There isn't much to record of the homeward run. During the whole thirty miles there was scarcely a perceptible change in the position of the two yachts, and the old "saw" that "a stern chase is a long chase" was fully verified. As they neared the Beaver Tail Light the Cambria gained on the Magic, and they came down toward the home stake apparently almost bow and bow, amid the greatest excitement among the spectators. The table underneath gives the official record of the race:—

In case there is no protest, the prizes will be as follows:—First schooner prize, Magic; second schooner prize, Cambria; first sloop prize, Gracie.

LEWIS M. RUTHERFORD, } Judges.
HENRY J. STEBBINS, }
SHEPHERD HOMANS. }

The victory of the winner of the second race for the Queen's Cup was the occasion of general rejoicing, and has added much to the fame which previous achievements had gained for her. The cup won by her is valued at 50 guineas. The Cambria was splendidly sailed and her owner is to be congratulated upon his success in securing the prize offered by the N. Y. Y. C. It was a source of general regret that the Dauntless, Sappho and America did not enter. The

MATCH BETWEEN THE PALMER AND CAMBRIA

was the second great feature of the programme, the conditions of which were that the vessels should start over a course twenty miles dead to windward and return for a cup valued at fifty guineas, according to Mr. Ashbury's proposition, the contest being the first of a series with crack yachts of the N. Y. C. Few imagined when the match was made that the Palmer would stand a chance to win, and that she would be defeated badly by her more illustrious rival was regarded as so certain that heavy odds were offered on the latter the night previous and just before the start, the offers finding but few takers. The course chosen was the same as that sailed over on the day previous, and the judges, Commodore H. S. Stebbins, C. H. Stebbins and Shepherd Homans, were stationed on board the Phantom, anchored near the Fort. As the rivals cruised about before the start they were closely observed, and certainly it was the unanimous and satisfactory result, for they presented a very handsome appearance, their evidently excellent trim promising a fine race. The Cambria carried a jib, working staysail, foresail, mainsail and working fore and main topsails, and the Palmer jib, flying jib, mainsail, foresail, foretopsail and maintopsail. The measurements of the vessels were as given under:—

Name.	Owner.	Tonnage.	Area.
Cambria	James Ashbury	227.6	2,106.0
Palmer	R. Stuyvesant	194.0	1,871.9

THE START.

While the wind blew fresh from the southwest the signal was given, and at 11.34 A. M. the line was crossed by both vessels, each immediately tacking in shore; the Palmer went about first, followed quickly by the Englishmen, and then the latter being still to windward. The Palmer went about again near the pier followed at once by the Cambria, keeping to the weather side. When off Point Judith the wind slackened, and the advantage thus gave to the American representative was at once apparent, for she speedily cut down the slight gap between the craft and began to go ahead, finally out sailing and getting much her rival's weather side. The Palmer was more than a quarter of a mile to windward at half past three o'clock, but in attempting to weather the buoy in one straight tack was unsuccessful and had to tack again, thereby losing distance. A few minutes later the Cambria, which had continued on her course south southwest, succeeded in weathering the buoy in one tack, the yachts rounding it as follows:—

Palmer	3.27.30	Cambria	3.28.30

The wind freshened once again, and going before the wind being the Palmer's best point of sailing, her friends were jubilant. From this period to the finish the contest was a settled thing, and possessed of comparatively little interest, as the Palmer gradually dashed ahead, widening the distance between the yachts, passing the lighthouse at Point Judith six minutes ahead, which satisfied all that the American would win handsomely, notwithstanding that she had to allow the Cambria 3 minutes and 19 seconds, as the yachts repeated Fort Adams the crowds on board the numerous pleasure crafts greeted them enthusiastically, and congratulated each other upon the success of their countryman's vessel. The official time was as follows:—

Name.	Start.	Return.	Corrected Time by Allowance.
Palmer	11h. 34m.	5h. 34m. 30s.	5h. 44m. 44.3s.
Cambria	11 24	5 24 27	5 41 35.7

The sailing of both yachts was admirable, the Palmer eclipsing all her previous achievements, and the Cambria giving proof that her reputation as a superior sailer on the wind was not unmerited. The Palmer (which was sailed by Mr. Brown, of the Dauntless) was built at Stonington, Ct., in 1863, by Capt. Loper, and was owned by him until 1867, when Mr. Rutherford Stuyvesant purchased her. As a matter of course, yachtmen generally were greatly elated over the victory of the Palmer, and the popping of champagne corks was heard until a late hour at the Ocean House.

THE CAMBRIA AND IDLER'S MATCH.

The second great match of the week—that between the Cambria and Idler, one of the fastest vessels in the New York Yacht Club—for a cup valued at fifty guineas, came off over the same course as sailed by the Cambria and Palmer, on the 18th inst., and terminated in a brilliant triumph for the English schooner. This result was more unexpected than was the victory of the Palmer the day prior, the Idler being considered far superior to the last named vessel, and it was thought that she would not only easily outstrip the Cambria in sailing before the wind, but that she would show her her heels in beating to windward. This almost universal belief had the natural effect of causing the betting to rule at long odds on the American. As before, the yachts sailed in accordance with the rules laid down by the New York Yacht Club, the Cambria allowing her opponent 2 minutes 50 6-10th seconds. The measurements of the yachts were as follows:—

Name.	Entered by	Tonnage.	Area.
Cambria	James Ashbury	227.5	2,106
Idler	T. C. Durant	133.5	1,834.6

Besides the crew, the Idler had on board, as guests, Messrs. Moses H. Grinnell, Mr. Beach, of Hartford; Mr. Bradford, Judge Dibble, Mr. Griswold and Captain Dick Brown. The Cambria carried Messrs. Hamilton Norton, Secretary of the New York Yacht Club; Frede. R. Jones and others. The judges were Commodore Stebbins, who acted as starting judge; Shepherd Homans, referee for the Cambria, on the Idler, and Chas. H. Stebbins, for the Idler, on the Cambria. About twelve o'clock the yachts left their anchorage and dropped down the bay, around the breakwater, accompanied by the America and other yachts which accompanied the racers. The Cambria carried flying jib, lore staysail, foresail, mainsail and working fore and main topsails. The Idler carried the customary fore and aft sails, with the exception of the fore gaff topsail. At 12.25 the signal gun was discharged and the yachts were off before a stiff breeze from the southwest, passing the line as follows:—

Cambria	12h	29m	50s
Idler	12	30	01

The two yachts started well into the windward shore. The tide was about full and soon began to ebb. On the first starboard tack the Idler outpointed the Cambria, and kept elegantly to the windward, while the Cambria fell to leeward. The wind freshened to a nine knot breeze, and the deck of the Idler was swept by every wave. The Cambria stood away on a long tack to the southeast, being at least two points to the lee bow of the Idler. Here a most unfortunate accident happened to the Idler. The clasps on her stem at the water line, upon which the bowsprit and jib-boom stays are secured, started off several inches, compelling her captain to tack ship immediately, and to secure it by the anchor chain and double tackle, otherwise she would have lost her bowsprit and masts. This port tack lost the Idler all the advantage she had gained. The Cambria continued on the southward until she was able to pass the buoy on the port tack. A strong tide was now setting to the eastward, and met the Idler on the weather bow. The Idler rounded 19 minutes behind the Cambria, winged out before the wind, but jibed when off Point Judith, and after passing it. It was evident now that the Idler could not win, although she was gaining steadily on the Cambria. The Minnehaha followed the yachts from the buoy, and had on board a number of invited guests. The Cambria sailed on before the wind, her tremendous topsails towering high in the air. She passed the line and the race was won. The Idler came up shortly after, closely followed by the Magic. The following is the official time;—

Name.	Starting.	Buoy.	Return.
Cambria	12h. 29m. 50s.	2h. 54m. 30s.	5h. 47m. 20s.
Idler	12 30 01	4 54 10	5 57 25

After making all allowance the Cambria has beaten the Idler 8:43.4.

CLUB RACE TO NEW BEDFORD.

It having been resolved the evening previous that the squadron should proceed to New Bedford on the 19th the preparations for getting under weigh were early commenced, Vice Commodore J. G. Bennett, Jr., having command in the absence of Commodore Stebbins, who had left for New York on the 18th inst. The fleet passed the line at 10.45 in the following order:—Magic, Palmer, Cambria, Madeleine, Dauntless, Madgie, Phantom, Idler, Sappho, Alarm, followed by the others at various distances. The America left for New York. It was a scrub race from the usual starting place off Fort Adams to Palmer's Island Light, New Bedford harbor. During the whole morning it had been calm, but the wind now sprang from the south, with the tide setting strong to the eastward. The Cambria, Magic, Madgie and Madeleine headed toward Beaver Tail Lighthouse, while the Dauntless, Phantom and Sappho held well to the channel. Seaconset Point was passed after three tacks and the whole fleet then stood away before the wind.

Having passed Beaver Tail, the wind changed to the southwest, and, having the wind now strong astern, all sailed wing and wing. The Cambria kept spreading one sail after another and it now became a question between her and the Dauntless which should carry the most sail. The Dauntless began to rapidly overhaul the yachts ahead of her, and soon after passing Westport her bow was even with the Madgie. She retained this relative position for some time, the Dauntless having the Cambria about one-half mile on her starboard bow, but, spreading her enormous square sail, the former worked rapidly ahead and soon passed the Madeleine and Palmer. It was now a race as to the schooners—between the Magic, which was still ahead, and the two great rivals. The Englishman carried every stitch of canvas which it was possible to crowd on, but the Dauntless finally passed him near the light-boat, off Hen and Chickens Reef. The Sappho had been doing grand sailing and was now rapidly overhauling her antagonists. She came bearing down upon the [illegible] in perfect cloud of canvas.

First of all sailed the sloop White Cap, then the Dauntless came rapidly up, with the Magic close upon her, and when both jibed and passed Clark's Point their bows were about even. The Dauntless gained slowly, and passed the Light-house on Palmer's Island at 3.35, being a few seconds ahead. The Dauntless dropped her pace at first in the inner harbor; the Cambria anchored on her flank. The revenue cutter Active, now lying in the harbor, saluted with cannon. The yachts of the Atlantic Yacht Club, which had arrived on Wednesday, together with the Fleetwing and Fleur de Lis, were decorated with the flags of the different clubs; a salute of 37 guns was given to the squadron, by order of Mayor Richmond. When entering the harbor the Sappho, through the carelessness of her pilot, grounded between Fort Phœnix and the school ship. The copper was badly scraped from her bottom, and she will have to be at once hauled up for repairs. The yachts passed the line in the following order;—White Cap, Dauntless, Magic, Cambria, Gracie, Madeleine, Palmer, Madgie, Phantom, Sappho, Halcyon, Restless, Alarm and Josephine.

HUDSON AMATEUR ROWING ASSOCIATION.

The fourth annual regatta of this organization, which is composed of some of the best rowing clubs at present formed in this country, will come off on Monday, Sept. 5th, over the new course of the association, at Pleasant Valley, some seven miles above New York, on the Hudson river. The following club's, all of them well and favorably known to the entire amateur boating fraternity of the United States, compose the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association, viz.:—Atlanta Boat Club of New York, organized in 1847, and the oldest rowing club in this country; Gulick, Waverly and Columbia Clubs, of New York; Mutual and Beaverwyck, of Albany; Atlantic, of Hoboken; Vesper, of Yonkers; Hudson, of Jersey City, and the La Favoritas, of Hackensack. The above clubs number more than six hundred members, are the fortunate owners of splendid boat houses, and a squadron of boats unequaled either for racing or pleasure purposes. But it is upon the assembly in which the members of this association claim justly their greatest distinction. It must be remembered that the "H. A. R. A." challenged the celebrated London Rowing Club to pull a six-oared shell race, and although the invitation was worded in the most courteous manner, it was respectfully declined. This was greatly regretted, as the London Rowing Club are the admitted champions of the amateur oarsmen of Great Britain, and as the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association claim that distinction in American waters, the test would have been very gratifying to thousands upon this side of the Atlantic.

The programme for the forthcoming annual rowing gala day will consist of five races, viz.:—single scull shell, four oared shell, six oared gig, eight oared gunwale barge, and, as a finish, a six oared shell race for the championship of the association. This last event has always been a severely contested race and has developed for the three past years a warm rivalry and perfect oarsmanship between the clubs striving for the colors which carry with them the proud insignia of the championship of the entire organization. Well may the boys train and practice and row their mightiest for the bonny blue flag. This flag has to be won three years in succession by the same club to entitle them to its ownership. The present champion flag has been rowed for in all the annual regattas, three in number, of the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association, in September, 1867, it was won by the Atalanta Club, of this city, in their six oared gig Atalanta, defeating the Mutuals, of Albany; the Atlantics, of Hoboken, and the Columbia and Gulick clubs, of New York. In September, 1868, it was won by the Mutual Club, the Atalanta second, Gulicks third, Columbia fourth. In September, 1869, it was rowed for in six oared shells, and was won by the Atalantas, who defeated the Mutuals. The Atalantas now hold the flag, and an unusual effort will be made to transfer its custody to either the Gulick or Mutual clubs on the fifth of Sept. This effort and extensive preparation will render the "dark race" on that day a sight well worth seeing, and an event in the amateur boating history of the Empire State. The Gulicks, evincing a determination to wrest the colors from the Atlantas, have made and are making every possible effort to ensure success. Their crew were selected in July, and have been in constant training ever since, on the course above the dam, on the Hudson, at Troy. They have had nothing to do but to perfect themselves in rowing, as they have the body of first rate oarsmen, consisting of "Pop" Trunx, for stroke, well known as one of the best stroke oarsmen among our amateurs, and formerly stroke of the victorious crews of both the Mutual and Atalanta Clubs. With Trunx are Deely, Gannon, O'Neil, Gilbert and Blake, all good and accomplished oarsmen, who ought, and no doubt will, make their new six oared shell, built by Charley "Ellis" Thum, "hum" the miles over the course on regatta day. And then comes the Mutual Club, always noted for their enduring and tip top oarsmanship. The confidence and pride extended to them by the lovers of boating in Albany is worthily bestowed, for they have upon more than one occasion proved themselves "hard to beat" at the "paddles." They are also making unusual exertions to regain the flag and champion ship, and "Stan Condon" is held upon hearing of the Mutuals as A 1, and "nothing shorter," at the home stake-boat. The Mutual crew ranks as "the best they ever had," and consists of Whitney, stroke; Kearney, Shattuck, Adams, Seawarts and Piepenbrink. This fine crew has been in thorough and constant preparation for many weeks, and they will row into the line well fixed to make a good gallant and determined effort to win the first honors of the day. Thomas Fearon, of Yonkers, is building their shell.

The Atlantas, whose time-honored crimson has crossed the line "away ahead" many a time and oft during their years of rowing, are rather quiet, and are not, apparently, going as much work as such an important contest really deserves. They are rowing but once a day, while the Gulicks and the Mutuals are in their shells and hard at it twice each day. In former years the Atalantas did at least as much pulling and walking before the race as their competitors. Many of their friends regret their refraining in Gotham during the unexampled and prolonged heat term we have experienced. The Atalanta crew consists of "Doc" Willers, for stroke, supported by Waterbury, Handy, Smith Le Roy and Van Raden, constituting an unusually effective crew of amateurs, if put in proper condition to do justice to their capabilities and skill. For the single scull race the Gulick, Columbia and Atalantas will enter. For the four-oared shell race the Vesper, Gulick and Atalantas will compete. Six-oared gigs, Mutual, Beaverwyck and Atlantic clubs. In the eight-oared gunwale barge race, entries will be made by the Columbia, Hudson, Vesper, Gulick and Atalanta clubs. It will be seen by this programme that the fourth annual regatta of the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association is sure to prove one of the events of the aquatic season of 1870, and an occasion to be marked as a "red letter day" in our boating annals. It is the unanimous wish of all the racers, especially those who form the shell crews, that the steamboats and barges accompanying the various clubs should be anchored during the races, so as not to interfere with or give the racing shells their wash and rough water, as has been the case in the past regattas. This was especially the case last year, when the Mutuals and Atalantas were obliged to stop rowing to save themselves from being swamped. Let's have a level three mile pull without obstruction, in all the races, and then the best crews are "sure to win."

YACHTING IN ENGLAND.

THE ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON REGATTA.

THE VANGUARD WINS THE QUEEN'S CUP.

THE PRINCE OF WALES CUP WON BY THE EGERIA.

This great regatta on the southern coast of England commenced on Aug. 2d, at the headquarters of yachting, the Isle of Wight. This year an extra attraction was offered, the Prince of Wales giving a new prize, called a Challenge Cup, value 100 guineas, open to English and American yachts, to be held by the winner so long as the country he represents is able to maintain it, and with a view to sinking all minor differences as to the general arrangements of a yacht; there is to be no restriction as to the number of hands, canvas, or the boats that are to be carried, so as to allow the utmost freedom of action. The 9th inst. was the day originally fixed upon for the race for

THE QUEEN'S CUP,

but it fell through from lack of wind, and the cutter match, arranged for the 10th, was postponed in its favor. The entries were as follows:—

Yacht.	Rig.	Tons.	Owner.
Christabel	Cutter	52	Lord Annesley.
Flying Cloud	Schooner	75	Count Batthyany.
Hirondelle	Cutter	86	Lord H. Lennox.
Guinevere	Schooner	284	C. Theilusson.
Arrow	Cutter	94	T. Chamberlayne.
Egeria	Schooner	182	J. Mulholland.
Vanguard	Cutter	80	Col. Verschoyle.
Shark	Schooner	176	Duke of Rutland.

In spite of land and sea fogs no rain fell, and at daybreak there was not a symptom of wind; on the contrary, a fine prospect of reef points beating a tatoo on mainsails seemed to be well ensured. Just before the time appointed for the start, however, a light E. S. E. draught could be felt, scarcely sufficient to blow out the fighting flags, and punctually at 10 A. M. the competing yachts cast to starboard and commenced the race with a strong east going tide. Christabel, Flying Cloud, Hirondelle and Guinevere held on their starboard tacks for some little time, but the Arrow, Vanguard and Egeria came round sharp, and led in the order named on the port tack, the Vanguard soon slipping through Arrow's lee, and taking very little advantage, however, of light airs. A brave weather tide soon swept them down clear of the harbor mouth, but the light eddy wind, curling round Old Castle Point, that had brought them down off Osborne, was soon worked out, and came down the man instead. The Hirondelle and Flying Cloud wisely set balloon topsails, the rest large working ones and big jibs, and Vanguard balloon foresail; but why the last named, or both, are allowed to carry such a mill, is not second to tell, it is hard to tell. Off King's Quay the Vanguard had struggled into the river banks have watched their proceedings with the greatest interest. On Saturday Renforth, Taylor, Winship and Martin were out in good time for a trial in the craft built by Mr. Armstrong (of Messrs. Palmer's), and named the Jarrow-on-Tyne. This boat, it will be remembered, is upon the "rounded up" shallow plan of the Experiment—the skiff built for James Taylor, and she is some three feet shorter than the new Jewitt. The crew took her at a capital rate of speed from Scotswood Suspension Bridge down to the Redheugh Bridge and back, a distance of about six miles, and the boat performed very well. The crew expressed themselves highly satisfied with her, but many of the waterside critics gave a less favorable verdict, declaring that "the boat stopped at the end of the stroke." On Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, there was a large gathering of the backers and friends of the crew at the Ord Arms, Scotswood, to see the Dunston-on-Tyne, Mr. Jewitt's new boat, put to the test. This craft is designed upon the very finest lines, and hangs upon such a delicate poise when occupied by her crew that an experienced hand only could sit her. In the hands of the Tyne champions, however, she performs splendidly, and in a five miles trial on Sunday won a favorable verdict from all sides. The crew took her down from Scotswood Bridge as far as Percy's boat house, where they turned in four strokes, and returned to Scotswood. Afterwards the Jarrow was brought out of Mr. Gibson's boat house, and a short spin was taken in her to show the difference in style between the two boats. We understand that both boats have been weighed, and that, when fitted with rowlocks, &c., there is scarcely any difference between them, both scaling within a very little of 90lb. It has been decided that the crew shall leave Newcastle for Glasgow on Monday, Aug. 8; on the following day they will take their passage on board the Allen Company's steamer Hibernia to Quebec, where they will be met by Geo. Wallis, and conducted to the quarters he has prepared for them at Montreal, J. Adams will accompany them as "sparc man." The crew will have three weeks in which to recruit from the effects of the voyage and change of climate, and in which, also, to make themselves well acquainted with the course they are to row over.

A pleasant, comfortably furnished house has been secured for the Tynesiders a short distance above the railway wharf, Lachine, which they were expected to occupy on the 22d or 23d inst. A commodious shed has been erected on the eastern side of the house, wherein the boats will be stored. The St. Johns men will not probably arrive before the 28th inst., by which time quarters will likewise be in readiness for their occupancy. They have been attending strictly to business and report represents them as already in fine trim, their practice promising that, should no accident occur, the time made in the coming contest will be the fastest ever accomplished in a six mile race. They are said to have rowed three miles to a stake-boat and back recently in thirty-six minutes and fifty-five seconds, which is 2 minutes and 33 seconds faster than the best recorded time, made by the Ward brothers in 1867, at Springfield. Such reports must be accepted with a few grains of allowance, however, as they may be circulated by the friends of the opposing crew for the purpose of securing favorable bets and turning the current of speculation, which is at present in favor of the Tyneside four. Below we present a letter from the English champion to Mr. Wallis, Secretary of the Lachine Boating Club, who has exerted himself with commendable zeal in carrying out the project, and to whose individual efforts is due, in a great measure, the gratifying result:—

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, August 2, 1870.

S. H. WALLIS, Esq., Montreal.—DEAR SIR.—Your two letters and telegram are at hand, and I owe you an apology for not answering them at an earlier date. I thought it best to wait until we fixed upon the day of our departure for Canada before writing to you, and hence the delay. We have decided to leave Newcastle on Monday next, August 8th, and on the following day we will sail from Glasgow for Quebec in the Allen steamer Hibernia. I suppose we shall be some eleven or twelve days on the passage, but doubtless you will be duly advised at Montreal of our arrival on the St. Lawrence and will meet us at Quebec, as you have so kindly offered to do. You have been a host of assistance to me, and your kindness in giving useful advice, and for the trouble you have taken to arrange for our accommodation upon our coming amongst you. Be assured that we appreciate the good feeling which has prompted your actions on our behalf. Upon arriving, under your kind guidance, at Lachine, we shall be glad to go at once to the quarters you have provided for us. Our party will number five, or at the most six, namely, Mr. John Adams, who kindly acts as my trainer, myself, and, in case of accident, James Wood, Thomas Winship, John Martin, myself, and perhaps one of the supporters of the crew. We will bring with us two four oared boats, and, as you say, a couple of Mulholland's single scull shells. Of course we have used our best judgment in ordering the erection of a boat house for our craft; but there been any available accommodation for the boats at our lodgings you would not have done so. With regard to the challenge from Hanlan to Lee, I may say that I have never rowed a match during my stay in America; but the match will have to come off in Canadian waters, and I shall be happy to have the aid of your experience and information in choosing a suitable course. I may add that at the present time the whole of our crew are well, and all looking forward with pleasurable anticipations to a sojourn amongst gentlemen who have already given such tokens of their good will and consideration. Trusting that upon our arrival we shall find all matters connected with the match proceeding as smoothly as they have done since it was arranged by you, I remain, dear sir, yours respectfully, JAMES RENFORTH,

Champion Sculler of England.

PORTLAND YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

The annual regatta of the above named club was held on Tuesday, August 16th, and the weather being very pleasant a number of lovers of this description of sport gathered to view the fleet as the vessels cleft the waters. The entries were eleven in number, as given below:—

First Class—Ethel, Commodore Churchill; Ray, Vice Commodore Smith; Fearless, Captain Harrington; Alarm, Captain Preble.

Second Class—Spy, Captain Taylor; Sparkle, Captain Hull; Kate, Captain Richards; Ellis, Captain Sheridan.

Third Class—Whisper, Captain Thomas; Mayflower, Capt. ——; Adie, Captain ——.

The course sailed was for first and second class yachts from Bug Light proceeding out the harbor, leaving the buoys on Stanford and Spring Point ledges on the starboard hand, House Island on the port hand, out by White Head, passing between Great Green Island and Green Island reef buoy, down to Half Way Rock, leaving the buoy on Webster's Rock and the Half Way Rock on the starboard hand, thence up to the buoy on Bulwark Ledge, to the pitch from whence they took up the run—Ethel with Lucretia who had given Sanford the go by, next, and the pace became lively to the main mile pole. On the lower stretch his jockey let out Haric, and passing Sanford and Legatee as if they were standing, he challenged Alloway for the lead, and, gallopping home, won the race with ridiculous ease by six lengths, Legatee second, half a length before Pat Malloy, Sanford fourth and Tom Wolfolk last. Time, 3:10. The winner was subsequently sold for $5,000, and goes into Mr. A. Taylor's stables to be trained for his engagements at Jerome Park this fall. Mr. John O'Donnell was the purchaser.

THIRD RACE.—Free handicap, purse $600; for all ages; one and three-quarter miles; conditions as of above handicap.

FOURTH DAY—TUESDAY, AUGUST 16TH.

OYSTERMAN WINS THE HURDLE RACE—HELMBOLD WALKS OVER FOR THE $800 PURSE, AND JUDGE CURTIS WINS THE MILE AND A HALF DASH.

The weather on the fourth day continued fine and delightfully cool, and although there were only two races on the card, yet as one was a hurdle race and the other brought the two fyers, Judge Curtis and Glenelg, together, the attraction was sufficiently great to induce an immense attendance of visitors to the races. The grand stand was crowded in every part, and the excitement of the hurdle race elicited universal expressions of delight.

THE HURDLE RACE

opened the ball, and was a handicap race for a purse of $600, of which the winner took $500 and the second horse $100; two miles, and over eight hurdles. The entries were Col. McDaniel's b h Oysterman Jr., 6 years, 150 lbs.; C. P. Elwes' b h Sir Joseph, 6 years, 145 lbs; J. Grand's br h Raven, 140 lbs, and E. Gray's br h Morris, aged, 140 lbs. Clement Alloway rode Oysterman, Sutcliffe was on Sir Joseph, Roche on Raven, and Rose piloted Morris. Oysterman, on the strength of his numerous previous victories, was the favorite, selling in pools at the rate of $200; Sir Joseph, $50; Morris, $60, and Raven $35. The favorite was the first to go ahead, clearing the first hurdle in advance of Sir Joseph, with Morris third and Raven last, a position he never improved throughout the race. Oysterman led a length at the second hurdle, Morris, who had passed Sir Joseph at the turn, being second, two lengths ahead of Sir Joseph. The third hurdle, near the half-mile pole, and on the lower stretch, and the fourth, half way up the straight stretch, were both jumped without any change in the positions of the horses, all taking the leaps beautifully without a single mistake. As they passed under the string on the first mile, run in 1:59, Oysterman was three lengths in front of Morris, who was almost the same distance before Sir Joseph, and Raven three lengths behind the latter. The fifth, sixth and seventh hurdles were taken in the same relative order, amid the hearty acclamations of the spectators, who were highly gratified at the admirable manner in which the horses flew over the obstacles. On the lower stretch Morris went up to Oysterman, and the pair raced neck and neck together for some distance, but gradually Oysterman's head appeared in front, and at the head of the stretch he was a length ahead. Re-aining this advantage to the eighth and last hurdle, half way up the homestretch, he cleared it a length in front of Morris, and in the struggle which ensued, short, sharp and decisive, from thence to the stand, he held his own throughout, and won a magnificent race by a length, Morris beating Sir Joseph by five lengths for second money, Raven last. Time, 3:57.

SARATOGA COURSE, August 17.—THE FIRST RACE.—HURDLE RACE HANDICAP.—For all ages, two miles, over eight hurdles, $500 to the winner, $100 to the second horse.

Time, 3:57.

THE SECOND RACE

for a purse of $800, for all ages, two miles and three-quarters, proved a walk over for Mr. Babcock's ch c Helmbold, who was the only entry for it. The horse was cantered leisur ing the eighth and last hurdle together, she quitted him the moment she landed and came home a winner by a length. Oysterman, who came with a strong rush in the last fifty yards, was second, having beaten Sir Joseph near the stand. Time, 3:09¼. After the race Col. McDaniels went to the judges and preferred a charge against Alloway for "pulling" Oysterman in the race, for he had ridden him entirely against his instructions. The pools were ordered not to be paid by the judges until the matter was investigated, which was done after the races, when the judges rendered the following decision:—

SARATOGA, N. Y., August 18.

The judges are of the opinion that the charges brought by Colonel McDaniels against C. J. Alloway, regard ng his riding of Oysterman, Jr., in the hurdle race to-day, indefinite in matter and not sustained by any evidence produced, and direct that the horses be placed as first announced at the close of the race.

THE SECOND RACE

was a dash of three-quarters of a mile, for a purse of $300, which had eight starters:—Flash of Lightning, Chillicothe, King's Excuse, Echo, Baffle, Scathelock, Norton Colt and Kelso. Flash of Lightning sold for $410; Norton Colt, $260; Baffle and King's Excuse, coupled, $200; field, $285. The favorite was first off, with Norton Colt second, Chillicothe third, Echo fourth and Kelso last. They ran amid a cloud of dust across the enclosure, and on entering the regular track Flash of Lightning was seen in the lead, with Chillicothe second, Norton Colt third, and King's Excuse next, the others strung out in Indian file behind. The race was evidently confined to the favorite and Chillicothe, who were four lengths ahead of the others, and after a very exciting contest all the way up the homestretch, the favorite won by a length. Time, 1:17¼.

THE FOUR MILE RACE

was for a purse of $1,200, and the contestants were Heimbold, Pat Malloy and Carrie Atherton. Heimbold, in pools, brought $2,000; Carrie Atherton, $820; Pat Malloy, $640. Carrie Atherton made the running at a moderate pace, with Pat Malloy second, six lengths behind, and the favorite at Pat's quarters. They ran without any change through the first mile in 1:56¾, the second in 1:56¾, and entered upon the third mile. Heimbold and Pat Malloy now closed rapidly on the mare, and as they ran thus to the three-quarter pole, where Pat Malloy left Heimbold, and lay two lengths behind Carrie Atherton as the latter dashed under the string into the third mile, the favorite half a length behind Malloy. Now came the momentous struggle, and shouts of exultation arose of "The favorite is beaten" as he was seen to give unmistakeable signs of quitting on the first quarter. Still he struggled gamely on, but the others were leaving him in the rear, and his rider was freely applying the whip to him. At the head of the stretch Pat Malloy deprived Carrie Atherton of the lead, and the race lay apparently between the pair, the fielders being exultant at the prospect of Heimbold's defeat, whose supporters looked correspondingly blue. Half way down Carrie Atherton began to tire badly, and Heimbold, who nipped at every stride, passed her at the distance Pat Malloy, in turn, "cut it," and Heimbold, struggling on with indomitable gameness, won the race by a length, Pat Malloy second. Time, 7:32¾, being the same as was made by Fashion in her memorable race with Boston. Heimbold was terribly distressed at the finish.

RACE DAY.—Purse, $1,200, for all ages; dash of four miles.

THE CONSOLATION PURSE

of $500, one mile and three-quarters, was run for by Glenelg, 101lbs.; Alta Vela, 91lbs.; and Tom Woolfolk, 94lbs. The betting was:—Glenelg, $800; field, $415. Alta Vela, with a strong lead, made the running at a good pace for a mile and a half, when Glenelg came out, and, passing his opponents with consummate ease, won easily by two lengths. Time, 3:12¾. This race terminated the meeting.

RACE DAY.—Consolation Purse, $800; for all ages: one and three-quarter miles; horses beaten once during the second meeting allowed 7 lbs.; twice, 14 lbs.; three times, 21 lbs.

AMONGST the distinguished Germans who have been summoned to take up arms on behalf of their country are Prince Pless, the purchaser of Blue Gown, and M. Andre, who some time since bought The Colonel. M. Andre has made a present of the son of Knight of Kars and Boadicea to the King of Prussia, with the hope that he may become His Majesty's favorite charger. The double winner of the Grand National will doubtless soon be called on to give proof whether he can behave as well under fire as across a stiff line of country.

PEDESTRIANISM.

BILL YOUNG TO BILL ADSETTS.

A CHALLENGE TO RUN ONE HUNDRED YARDS.

We received a call from Wm. H. Young, formerly of the Quaker City, but who for nearly a year past has resided at Louisville, on the 18th inst., the object of his visit being to leave the challenge which appears underneath, daring his quondam opponent, W. H. Adsetts, to meet him again on the race track for money. We shall, doubtless, hear from the latter in season for our issue of next week, when we hope to be able to announce that a match has been effected. Read the defi:—

NEW YORK, Aug. 18, 1870.

FRANK QUEEN.—DEAR SIR.—Having heard, during my late visit to Middletown, N. Y., that Wm. H. Adsetts had declared, after his race with Geo. Forbes, at Providence, R. I., last year, that he could allow me eighteen feet start and then beat me, I hereby challenge him to run me one hundred yards, flying start, for $1,000 a side, anywhere between Philadelphia and New York, or at either of those cities, at any time between the 15th and 20th of October, as Adsetts may choose. I will not hold him to his offer to give me eighteen feet, for I do not wish anything but an even, up-and-up race, and will not take an inch from him; for that matter I regard his offer as so much braggadocia, and not worth considering. I will deposit $50 in your hands as an earnest of my intentions, and call upon Adsetts to cover it if he is not afraid to meet me, his money to be sent to your office on or before August 31st. The next deposit, of $450 a side, to go on September 1st, and the balance on the day of the race. The CLIPPER to be temporary stakeholder, and a final stakeholder to be chosen at some time to be hereafter agreed upon. Hoping that Adsetts will accept this, and anxiously awaiting his reply, I am Yours respectfully, W. H. YOUNG.

YOUNG AND KENDRICKS MATCHED.—As an afterclap to the race between Harris and Crandall, at Middletown, N. Y., on the 16th inst., a match was entered into between young Bill Young and old Bill Kendricks, who agreed to run one hundred yards, 15 feet scratch start, to go by report of pistol, for $500 a side, at or near Paterson, N. J., on the 10th day of October. The sum of $25 a side was then deposited in the hands of James Matley, the Philadelphia bonifacer, to bind the bargain, he being chosen final stakeholder. The second deposit, of like amount, is to be placed in his hands on Aug. 27th; the third, of $150 a side, on Sept. 26th, and the remainder, $300 a side, to go up on the day of the race. The race is to take place between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock P. M.

TWO MILE RACE.—A spirited race of two miles, for £20, came off at the Prince of Wales' ground, Bow, London, Eng., on July 30th, between R. Coker and H. Guy. They had to run eight laps and 282 yards to complete the distance, W. Wearden, the referee, sending them away to a good start. Coker shortly after showed in front, and held the lead for the first mile (time, 5min. 16 3-4sec). Guy then began to improve his position, and at the commencement of the last lap had drawn level. They raced abreast down the back-stretch, and rounding the last turn, Coker again shot in front. Guy, however, caught him at 50 yards from the finish, and ultimately won a splendid race by three-quarters of a yard in 10min. 35sec.

HARRIS VS. ADSETTS.—On Aug. 17th an agreement was entered into between John Walker and James Matley, the former betting the latter $500 that Harris can beat Wm. H. Adsetts in a 100 yard race, at Wilmington, Del., Sept. 7th, 15 feet scratch start, between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock P. M. Jim Colbert now holds $50 a side and the balance is to be posted at his house, the "Woodbine," 228 Arch street, Philadelphia, on Aug. 31st, when a final stakeholder will likewise be chosen.

KERARONWE VS. DEERFOOT.—We understand that a match has been made between Keraronwe, the Indian champion runner of Canada, and Deerfoot, whose feats in England some years ago made him famous in the land. The match is for $1,000 and they are to run three miles, either at Montreal or Buffalo, on the 27th inst.

R. STITT, of Spencerville, and D. G. Macdonnell, of Morrisburgh, the holder of the champion half mile cup of Canada, are matched to run one mile for a wager of $500 a side. The race is to take place at Prescott on the 24th of Sept.

BURGESS AND AN UNKNOWN, said to be very fleet of foot for a young 'un, are to run seventy-five yards, for $250 a side, at Toronto, C. W., on Sept. 21st.

THE TRIGGER.

PRAIRIE CLUB TOURNAMENT.

The prize tourney of the Prairie Shooting Club, so successfully conducted throughout, was brought to a close at Lousville, on the 18th inst., the object of his visit being to leave the challenge which appears underneath, daring his quondam opponent, W. H. Adsetts, to meet him again on the race track for money. We shall, doubtless, hear from the latter in season for our issue of next week, when we hope to be able to announce that a match has been effected. Read the defi:—

The aggregate value of the prizes offered was $5,000, and the principal prizes and their winners were as follows, the number of competitors being 108:—

A fine double-barreled breech-loading shot gun, presented by J. H. Foster and valued at $300, won by W. H. Haworth, of Quincy. A $250 gold watch, Elgin make, won by H. Keely, of Louisville, Ky. An English water-proof hunting suit, valued at $20, won by C. K. Pierce. A fine double-barreled breech-loading shot gun, valued at $400 and presented by Joseph Reuter, won by A. H. Sagendorf, of Elm street, Chicago. A $250 Weesen gun, won by D. D. Hunter, of Chicago. A $150 gun, presented by R. Thomas, won by K. Price, of this city. The late traditional gold medal, won by Abner Price, of the Kenwood Club, Chicago. A heavy silver pitcher, won by H. Conley, jr., of the Prairie Club. A silver salver, won by A. H. Sagendorf, of Chicago, and presented by Joseph Reuter. A state gold medal, won by A. W. Hagle. A state gold medal, won by Mr. H. Sidey. [illegible] won by A. H. Sagendorf. One hundred dollars cash, won by [illegible]. One hundred dollars cash, won by [illegible]. One hundred dollars cash, won by J. E. Long, of Detroit. One hundred and fifty dollars cash, won by Abe Kleinman, of Calumet. One hundred dollars cash, won by D. D. Hunter. One hundred and fifty dollars cash, won by Abner Price. Two $50 prizes, won by H. H. Hooker.

RIFLE MATCH.—The team from the Victoria Rifle Club, of Hamilton, Canada, who went to the provincial match held at Montreal lately, brought back with them four first-class prizes out of six, amounting to nearly $400, besides six club medals, made of solid silver, in the shape of a Maltese cross, with the letters Q. R. A. This is now considered the champion club of the Dominion. They also beat the Bristol (England) club a short time ago.

THE ROLLER SEAT, invented last spring by Dr. Freeman and Mr. Corbett, and patented by Col. C. D. Jackson, of Montgomery, Ala., is said to be in no wise an infringement upon any other patent, and is stated to be superior to all others.

BASE BALL.

THE FOREST CITY NINE, OF CLEVELAND.

THEIR GAMES WITH THE MUTUALS, EUREKAS, UNIONS, AND STARS.

The visit of the now noted Forest City Club, of Cleveland, Ohio, to our city, and the fine play they have shown, has quite roused up the fraternity and the patrons of the game to a degree of interest in base ball which approaches nearer to the excitement attendant upon the Red Stocking matches in June last than anything else we have had in the way of ball play since. The Mutual and Atlantic match did not excite the interest one would naturally expect, owing to causes which we fully explained in our report of the match; but inasmuch as the people who visit our ball grounds were fully aware that these Forest City boys had come to try their best to defeat our crack nines, and that the latter would equally strive their utmost to prevent them, of course a degree of interest in their games was excited which led to a large attendance at the leading contests, the most numerous assemblage of the week being the gathering on the Union ground, at Brooklyn, on the occasion of the return game between the Forest Citys and the Mutuals. It will be remembered that the Mutuals, on their visit to Cleveland in July, met with their first defeat on their tour, at the hands of the Forest City nine, the contest being quite a model display of the beauties of the game on both sides, the Forest City nine winning by the small score of 7 to 5. As this score has not been published previously in the New York journals, we quote the following from the Cleveland Leader as a matter of reference:—

"The Forest City nine never played a better game. Their fielding was simply perfect. If any one was more brilliant than the rest it was Kimball, who throughout the game played his base as few had ever seen it played before. His marvelous running, backward catch, in the fourth innings, and the brilliant double play with which he closed the eighth, were both exploits which brought down applause even from the Mutuals. Sutton at third, too, was brilliantly effective, and Carlton and Ward never played their positions so finely before. As for the out-field, no fly ball was allowed to touch the turf. Nothing was finer than Ward's stop of a red hot grounder from McMahon's bat. Pratt pitched in a style which quite surprised the New Yorkers, and J. White earned his ribbon by the finest foul bound catch ever made on the grounds." The score was as follows:—

INNINGS.	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
Forest City	0	0	4	0	1	0	1	1	0	7
Mutual	0	1	3	0	0	0	1	0	0	5

The fact of this victory having been obtained over the strong nine of the Mutuals, which, flushed with their noted triumph over the Chicago nine, of course added interest to the meeting of Aug. 16th, and hence fully 6,000 people crowded the Union grounds on Tuesday. Both nines appeared on the field in their regular uniforms, the Mutuals in white suits and green stockings, and the Forest Citys in white flannel dress with blue stockings, both nine presenting a fine appearance. This game was so well contested from first to last, and was marked with so many fine plays, that we give the details by innings:—

THE GAME.

First Innings.—The Mutuals having lost the toss, were sent to the bat at 3.30 P. M., Hatfield opening play with a high ball, which struck the club house at right field, John easily reaching his 2d by the hit. Regar followed with a grounder to 3d, which he got ready to look as if Pratt's swift pitching was going to be badly punished. Patterson, too, followed the lead of the others in the safe ball business, and the result was one run earned, with no men out and Egger at 3d. By a swift throw of White's to 2d, to catch Patterson, and the pretty handling of the ball by Kimball, who showed up in good form in the match, Patterson had to retire at 2d, Eggler in the interim getting in. While then disposed of the next two strikers by prettily taken foul balls, his fine display of catching eliciting applause from all present, it being, in fact, the finest catching, taken all in all, ever seen on the grounds..... Now came the Forest Citys' turn to face the pitching of Wolters, supported by an excellent field party, and all eyes were bent upon the upright and manly form of James White as he took his stand at the bat and faced Wolters. He did not hesitate, but let fly at the first ball within fair reach, as all skilful batsmen should do, and away it went bounding over the left field. Ward was not so successful, as he kept hitting at breast high balls, and, hitting under them each time, he struck out. Pratt, however, followed White's example, and, being equally successful, he secured his base and sent White home. Orris run next, with only one man out. Sutton then hit a ball from the handle of his bat, and, popping it up, had a life given him by Charley Mills, who, forgetting that all such high balls have an immense twist given to them by the bat, failed to grasp it properly as it fell, and it worked its way out of his hands. Carlton then tried three times to hit the ball, but failed, and as Charley Mills saw Pratt running for his 3d, instead of catching the ball on the third strike he muffed it, and sent it to 3d, cutting Pratt off, who was forced off by Sutton and Carlton, the latter getting his first on the play. Before anything more could be done in the way of run getting, Mills caught out Allison on a foul bound, thus closing the innings with the visit at 2 to 1 in favor of the Mutuals.

2. In the second innings the Mutuals made no addition to the score, White and Kimball putting the side out by pretty fielding..... On the other side, after Bond and Allison had struck out, Hatfield, White earned bases, but the latter was forced off by White a hit; and, though Ward also hit well for his base, he was captured by Wolters, on returning to first, on a foul, Martin throwing in the ball to Wolters, who himself took it to first.

3. Swandel opened on the Mutual side in the third innings with a safe bounder to left field, but Sutton disposed of the next two strikers by fine catches; and, after Patterson had batted well for his base, E. White captured the third man in good style..... On the other side, Pratt was disposed of by Wolters and E. Mills, and, after Sutton had had a life given him by Patterson, he hit well for his second, and, as Carlton and Allison also earned bases, two runs were scored; Allison, however, was dodged out at third by Hatfield, who dropped a fly ball purposely, thereby forcing Allison off at third, and Wolters and E. Mills capturing the last man, the third inning, showing the Blue Stockings to be in the van by a total of 5 to 3.

4. E. Mills opened play in the fourth innings and tipped out; Martin hit a safe one to right field and took his first. C. Mills then gave White a slight chance in the field, but the ball, which was not accepted, after which he sent a high ball to left field, which Heubel attended to amid loud applause, the catch being a beauty—two out and no runs. Before Martin could get in, Kimball captured Wolters on a throw to Carlton, and once again the Mutuals failed to score..... White dashed off with a hundred and thirty yard run, which his hit to centre field obliged him to make, in this inning, after which Ward tipped out, and but for a muff of Nelson's Pratt would also have retired; but this and a hit for three bases gave Pratt his third, and he ran in on Sutton's high ball to Patterson; Sutton, however, was caught out. Carlton then struck out and closed the innings. This left the lead with the Forest City nine by the totals of 7 to 3, and their stock began to decline in consequence.

5. The fifth innings were now commenced, and, after two strikers on the Mutual side had been finely put out by Sutton and Carlton at 1st base, and by Allison's catch, the succeeding three batsmen tried for their bases; but only one of them could get in, as Pratt made a fine catch and ended the innings for a single..... Allison led off on the Forest City side in this innings, and made a good hit, but by Kimball's hit to Swandel he was forced off at second, Kimball getting to his third by Hatfield's poor throw to E. Mills, and, after Heubel had made his base by a good hit, Hatfield let him have second by a dropped ball thrown to C. Mills, White's long fly to centre field

GONE WHERE THE WOODBINE TWINETH; OR,
The Slang of the Day.
SONG AND DANCE.

Respectfully Dedicated to the Inimitable Artists, Sheridan and Mack,

BY SAMUEL N. MITCHELL.

MALE.

When I go out to walk in the morning,
And ask for my gurd or my chum,
As sure as I do sharp will greet me
From the boys who all think they are come.
"Twill be, "Ouly, old boy, he has skerried,"
Or, "his noddy has gone off on a tear;"
Perhaps 'twill be "Mocks is quite buddy,"
Or, "Sunny, how are ye old beer."

Chorus—Oh, where is the language of our granddady's days,
'Tis not in these lines that we rayneth,
But, sir Financ'ers would say, "'tis far, far away,
It has gone where the woodbine twineth."

FEMALE.

When I go out to walk in the evening
I am often thus accosted by a brat—
"'Tis a pleasant evening, Sissy, but you ought to Go right away and shake that gaudy hat."
If I loiter near the crosswalk for a carriage,
One of a crowd of nobby boys will speak—
"She's as trim a little craft as hugs the curbing,
But, fellers, chaw it lightly on the beak.

Chorus—Oh, where is the language of our granddady's days, etc.

MALE.

When I go out a shopping with my sister,
Or a riding with some other fellow's gal,
'Twill be remarked that Miss so-and-so has cashed
The very worst they know—a perfect pal;
If I collide with some one on the sidewalk,
Which often makes me get the most infernal stare,
And as I pass them, on or more will utter—
"Good fracture, Gus, call now it them for ride?"

Chorus—Oh, where is the language of our granddady's days, etc.

FEMALE.

Last evening I went out with my lover
To see a favorite actress in the play—
Two "lady killers" had their seats behind me
And this is what one of them did say—
"Ain't that the slickest thing you ever saw,
It makes her double twisted in the head;
But 'pon my honor, Sidney, I am certain
I've surely mashed the little charmer dead."

Chorus—Oh, where is the language of our granddady's days, etc.

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Aug. 22, '70.

THE SEASON is about at an end at the watering places, every railroad train and steamboat and canal barge arriving here bringing a full cargo of living freight in the shape of sun-dried, wilted, hungry, mosquito-bitten, and otherwise demoralized specimens of humanity—some dead broke, and whose trunks have been left with considerate and obliging landlords "for repairs;" some "wrecked and wounded, sick and sore;" and the whole caboodle of them only too glad of the opportunity to tread again their native heath, and enjoy the comforts of home. You can see the "butterflies of fashion" on Broadway once more, with the remains of a wardrobe which has been made to do duty at each and every fashionable resort; you can easily recognise the returned prodigals by the out of their jibs, the skirts and overskirts, and all the varied paraphernalia which helps to set off the figure and build up the anatomy of "lovely woman." Houses which have remained "dormant and inactive," like a sleepy bull-frog, during the hot days which tried fat men's souls, are beginning to "emerge," as it were, from their quiescent state, and put on signs of life, liberty, and the probable pursuit of happiness. Men of business, who have been dragged away from day book and ledger by the seductive wiles and blandishments of manœuvring mothers and designing daughters, feel like a morning star, and go to work in that high key again, and begin the battle of life anew, in the hope of making up for the great losses incurred by this summer sortie on Long Branch, Newport and kindred places. Even our churches look alive again, and you can have the privilege of hearing a good square sermon if you can manage to keep awake long enough, and go one eye on the ten thousand dollar preacher. It was the late lamented Mister Benjamin Bolt who exclaimed:—"If I had but a thousand a year, Gaffer Green;" a thousand was the aim and ambition of Mister Bolt. But in this city of the soul scores of well meaning and other preachers are scarcely satisfied with ten times that sum. And yet it must not be supposed that we are finding fault with our holy brethren for getting all they can, and so forth, even though they do occasionally go out of the beaten track, like Louis Napoleon, to make war, without cause, upon unoffending Thespians and others whose province it is to amuse and entertain the people. And yet all clergymen are not "down on theatres," we'd have you all to know. Many clergymen are like theatrical managers—they give their congregations just such spiritual food as their tastes may crave; if a deck is taken kindly to strong doses of fire and brimstone, with countless souls consuming in everlasting fires, the worthy shepherd of that holy flock will roll up his sleeves, prepare his burning provender, and serve to order. You found fault with our recent hot spell, you complaining sinner; only wait till you get down there, "where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched," you'll then admit that this place is an ice house when compared with the other. If another flock like their spiritual medicine in small doses, ye gods and little fishes, a meek and lowly pastor will administer homœopathic pills so infinitesimally attenuated as to "leave nothing to desire," as our dramatic critics would say. Should a congregation be stuffed with more than an ordinary filling of piety, and require the preacher to come down upon the theatres, like the Philistines of old, their obedient servant will start off on an even keel, and before the end of the discourse is reached he will have jibed so often, and wore ship, and beat about and got on his beam ends, as to threaten not only the total annihilation of the great army of players, but the shipwreck of his own vessel and cargo. But, as we said before, all clergymen do not denounce all the histrionic friends; there are always some good men to be found among the gentlemen who adopt preaching as a means of livelihood and grace. Now there's our worthy brother, the Rev. Dr. Collyer—not he of model artist renown—a popular parson of Chicago. In a lecture, some time ago, he said, said he:—"I confess that I never saw such power, I never remarked such nature in any Christian pulpit that it was ever my privilege to sit under, as in Joseph Jefferson's Rip Van Winkle. It is nature, not art. No sermon scarcely in the world, except that of Christ's, when he stood with the adulterous woman, ever illustrated the power of love to conquer evil and to win the wanderer as that little piece, so perfectly ministered by this genius which God has given to illustrate in the drama the power of love over the sins of the race." Which is the histrionic ancestor of "Joseph and his brethren" now performing the venerable and sleepy Rip at Booth's Theatre. There is room in the world for the preacher and the player, and there is room in the kingdom above alike for the one as the other, all things being equal; so let us not be too hard on the clergy. "Jimmy, get out your new machine and go if she can stand a verse or two of the pure spirit of poesy, for I don't know how she'll act with the spirit of Joseph but I'll just bet yer a pair of old boots that she'll stand a little spirit of fansy all right. But I'll give her a trial, anyhow. Want it high pressure, or on the horizontal?" "Let it be mild and humanizing."

POOR NELLIE ON DER BEACH.

Translated from the Latin by "Our Jim" and his Machine.

I met Nellie Schmidt on der beach;
She stumbled awful on me
As der wild vafes rolled in,
And fell pelly flat
On der sandy din
Ven I met Nellie Schmidt on der beach.

I talked mid her dare on der beach;
Of last we did talk
In der most swadest way,
As along we did walk
On der bright, pleasant day,
Ven I met mit her dare on der beach.

I kissed Nellie Schmidt on der beach;
How fair dot sun shone,
How plue vas der sky,
As I kissed me "my own,"
Mit der leetle blue eye—
Dot is ven I nestle kiss on der beach.

I saw Nellie Schmidt on der beach,
Mid her heart shot away
Of der doze of her head;
Oh, yi, on dot day,
Ven I met Nellie Schmidt on der beach?

Coming all to late, and the players are "coming on swifting." Booth's and Niblo's led the way on the 15th, and to-night the Olympic will come tumbling in, and others will soon follow after, if we may be permitted to use the sublime and cheerful language of the famous author of that soul-stirring hymn of "Jack and Jill." We are, according to the injunctions of William Shakespeare, per Mr. Hamlet, seeing the players well bestowed; at least such is our desire, but whether well or ill, they'll be bestowed. We welcome the stranger from afar, and beseech him the good offices of these brother professionals "in the manner born;" make light the heart of the "old men," heavy man; give youth and activity to the "old men," and experience and wisdom to the juveniles. And while managers and players all over the country are investing their capital and talents in efforts to amuse the people, let it not be said that peoples are ungrateful, if Republics are. Give aid and encouragement to the drama, for, as the wise and well-informed poet has most truly said:—

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

and which is as incontrovertible as the back-action forward movement of the Emperor of France.....How different our views are under different circumstances. When we go to Dutch John's corner grocery, for sugar, he takes great pleasure in giving us a short weight, which we don't want; whereas, when we go to a theatre we are frequently bored with a long seat, when a short one would suit us best; but we are never satisfied, and that's just the long and the short of it, be its weight with you what it may.....Sometimes, of nights, we go sneaking round, here and there, putting our nose into other people's business, and jobbying ourselves with matters that don't concern us, just to gather items to please you. Once in a while, we "get caught in our dirt," so to speak, and various injuries are inflicted upon our meddlesome person before we are fully aware of the cause and nature of the belligerent act. But all the "ills that flesh is heir to" don't turn us from our ignominious purpose. Why, we have known ourself to "invade the sanctity of the domestic fireside," to interview that happy family and proclaim its vices to an eager public; and in order to add to the interest of these slanders against virtue, we have been known to lie about it; but such instances are very rare, for truth is stranger than fiction, "a very reliable gentleman of this city" has given us to understand. We never knew anybody so cheeky as we are; we go straight up to the doorkeeper of a theatre, and wither him with one of them there looks of our's; who's going to buy tickets when you can face it in, by sheer cheek. The other night, seeing a couple of weary wayfarers enjoying themselves in one of the stalls of an up-town restaurant, we thought "ah! here's a chance to hear something;" so we sat behind 'em, bless you, but go into the next stall, only separated by a curtain, and without even calling for one fish ball, we laid one ear, in the most shameful and barefaced manner, against a crack in the curtain, and heard this fragment of a "talk" between the connivial parties on the other side:—

"Why, me boy, you are drinking like a horse—enough." "Avast there, my hearty Sefton used to say; a horse don't take more than he wants, does he? Neither do I. There's precious little distinction between a horse and a man; one drinks water and the other drinks whiskey." "Yes," was the response; "and in p'int of quantity there's no great difference between some horses and some men that I know of either."

.....Our Jim's a funny chap; he don't care what he says, or how he insults people; he even makes game of the woman he boards with. T'other afternoon she was hanging out the bed clothes to dry, after she had been washing all day. When Jimmy reached home his eye caught sight of the banners flung to the breeze, at the same time that the landlady had finished the job. "Mrs. Calhoney," says Jim, his eyes beaming with mischief; "why are you like a drunken sailor?" "I'd have you to know, you mean little stink, that I'm not like a drunken sailor, and I don't want none o' your impidence, neither." "Awast, there," said Jim, in sailor lingo; "I'll tell you why you're like a drunken sailor—Because you've just three sheets in the wind."....And we not only sneak and spy upon the living, but upon the dead; manufacturing deceit, and prying propensities even to the verge of the tomb. While enjoying a walk in a neighboring "buryin' ground" a few days since, we came across a gravestone that looked as though it might have been planted at the time of the flood. "Ho, ho," thought we, as our eyes encountered the inscription thereon, "here's food for reflection." This is how it reads; it tells its own melancholy tale:—

ORIT.

TANSEN PRICE—AGED 22.

All ye who look upon this stone,
The warning heed, I pray;
Thou knowest not what thing may hap
To cut thee off to-day;
Thou knowest not how soon the grave
May be thine only bed,
I married but six weeks ago,
And I've been five weeks dead!

It's a sad tale, and carries its own moral. As it was, so it is and ever will be, world without end.....And now, having filled out the measure of our allotted space, we'll close the prologue and ring up the curtain on the new acts and scenes and incidents of the play.

City Summary.

THE STAGE AS A POPULAR NECESSITY.—It is interesting to resurrect for a moment the buried past, and to recall the social peculiarities of our fathers in those days when the arcana of theatrical life were as much a hidden mystery to the public at large as the rites once practiced in the temples of Eleusis. To mark, for instance, the rise of dramatic taste and culture in a community whose practices and teachings were of so domestic a character that the youthful branches durst speak of the play in a whisper only, and a visit to the forbidden precinct was the sure provocative of a parental drubbing, the memory of which still abides with many a worthy citizen since reputed as a prominent pillar of society. On the north side of John street, a few doors from Broadway, once stood an edifice devoted in the days of Hallam and Hodgkinson to the purposes of the drama, and Washington Irving, in his personal reminiscences, has left an amusing account of his earlier visits to the playhouse. The future historian then resided beneath the parental roof, within a stone's throw of the theatre (there was only one theatre in those days), and when he wished to witness a performance—which was quite often—he would be obliged to retire at an early hour, then, clambering out of his window, to skulk ignominiously through the streets until safe from observation in some cosy corner of the dramatic ark. Indeed there is reason to suppose that a clever performer was spoiled in young Wash., for he was very fond of declamation, and was addicted when at home to fencing bouts with chairs and tables, and even the family portraits; and, having worsted his imaginary adversary, would spout his favorite couplet:—

"Where'er I go my warlike deeds proclaim,
War is my pride, and Rodomont my name."

Despite all opposition, there seems to be in nearly all human breasts a latent predilection for the drama. There are comparatively few young people who do not love to read a clever written piece of romance, but more than this seems necessary to fill out the perfect measure of enjoyment. We wish to observe for ourselves the action so deftly portrayed by the pen, and see the characters pass, though in counterfeit resemblance only, before us. Thus the stage arose and became by degrees as much a necessity as the literature with which we beguile our leisure hours. To administer to this natural taste, and to give it proper direction, should be reckoned a justifiable phase of human ambition, and it will be well when the framers of our social ethics recognize this as a fact. There will then be less danger of running into the extremes which lead to corruption. In former times, owing to causes above stated, but little attention was lavished upon the arrangements and even the accessories of a theatre. All the original theatrical houses were barns, or barracks, with a very simple style of ornamentation, and costumes and wardrobes were worn until playgoers had become as familiar with them as with the surroundings of their private dwellings. We can imagine the dismay which would have overspread the countenance of the venerable Edmund Simpson had his stage manager proposed to expend upon the getting up of a single piece a sum equal to those which are now lavishly lished by our leading managers. In his time, a play which kept the boards a fortnight had enjoyed what is technically denominated a "run," and one that did not tire the public out in a month was pronounced a "triumphant success." Think of our modern theatres, which run a play for months—for hundreds of nights, it may be—and of which a solitary success enables the manager to retire upon a fortune! We hear a great deal about the depreciation of public taste, as accounting for the unsuccessful investment of fortunes in shows and spectacles, but the specialty of Booth's and Wallack's and Daly's is not show or spectacle, and yet we see the public resorting in multitudes to both these establishments, in their regular seasons, attracted by the completeness with which the standard productions are set before them. This perfection has been attained though years of unrelaxing study and devotion, and to it has been added a taste for the legitimate, and for the existence of the taste of which we have spoken. New York city has given origin, at sundry times, to not less than twenty-five theatres, legitimately such. First there were the old houses in John and William streets, then, the public taste demanding something better, arose the old Park Theatre—"The Drury of America." This being destroyed by fire after introducing such names as Kean, Kemble, Cooke, Conway and Macready to the public notice a temporary halt was made at Anthony street—an old brewery being fitted up for the purpose. Then followed the Lafayette Theatre, the old Chatham Theatre of Baerre, of ice cream garden celebrity, next the Bowery, the National, the Franklin, the New Chatham, the Olympic, the old Broadway, Niblo's, the Richmond Hill; then Wallack's, the Winter Garden, Laura Keene's, the New Bowery, new Olympic, Booth's, the Grand Opera House, and several which fluctuate between drama and the opera. Not only this, but nearly every leading town in the sister states has theatres and its opera house, and some thousands of persons of all degrees of talent are engaged exclusively in contributing to this popular predilection. Truly, the public sentiment has now altered since the days when Burchard hurled his denunciations at the theatre from the pulpit! The fall season will soon commence, when we hope to see a renewed interest manifested by the public in regard to theatrical entertainments.

MR. J. WESLEY HILL was married in this city on the evening of Aug. 18th, at the residence of Mr. George C. Boniface, by the Rev. J. B. C. Beaubien, to Mrs. Nellie Taylor, of Mobile, Ala.

THE GRAND CENTRAL HOTEL, on the site of the late Winter Garden Theatre on Broadway, will be opened to the public on Aug. 25th. When this hotel was known as the La Farge House it was a favorite resort of the profession, as, indeed, it may be again in the future.

MR. WILLIAM CRESWICK, the eminent English tragedian, who has for many years held a position of the first rank in the principal London theatres, arrived in this city on August 17th. He visits this country professionally, and many of our older citizens will recall with pleasure the excellence of his former efforts here some years since, when he impersonated a round of his favorite characters at the Park Theatre in this city and at the Tremont Theatre, in Boston, Mass. At that time, being a young man, strong predictions of his future excellence and greatness were made by the press and his personal friends, which his subsequent career has more than fulfilled. He now returns to us with his professional abilities ripened and mellowed by years of experience, observation and study, and many of our citizens will hail with delight his re-appearance upon our boards. To the younger members of our theatrical patrons we can say that, in his performances, they will find much enjoyment, as he is almost the only remaining representative of what we may, not disrespectfully term the old school of acting, of which our fathers speak with high commendation. As an actor he is chaste and talented, and may be regarded as a worthy exponent of the legitimate school. Prior to his departure from London he was entertained at a dinner by the Whitefriars Club, on which occasion his brethren of the Urban Lodge, F. and A. M., availed themselves of the opportunity of presenting him with a handsome testimonial, and on July 30th he received a complimentary farewell benefit at the Gaiety Theatre, when the flower of the English stage volunteered their services to do him honor, a full account of which appeared in the foreign summary of our issue of the 13th inst. The Sunday Times, of London, Eng., in speaking of his benefit, says:—

It is, of course, needless for us to criticise performances we have once and again dwelt upon. The great event of the day was the appearance of Mr. Creswick. His parts he acted in admirable style, and he was received with great enthusiastic. Mr. Creswick departs hence with the warm good wishes of sympathy and admiration. Concerning his visit to America a large field for which he embarks there can be little doubt of success; there is of the pleasure with which his return will be hailed by those who know him.

We trust to have the pleasure shortly to announce his early appearance at one of our city theatres.

THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, under the continued managerial control of Mr. James Hayes, aided and assisted by Mr. Dan Symons, as business manager, will open for the fall and winter season this evening, 22d inst., with Mrs. James A. Oates' newly organized comic opera company as the stellar attraction. The performance will consist of a translation and adaptation of Herve's opera bouffe, entitled "La Petite Faust," by Mr. H. B. Farnie, so called "Little Faust." It has been arranged for the English stage by Mr. Frank Musgrave and will be produced with entirely new scenery from the pencils of Messrs. Isaac E. Hayes, J. Johnson and Lamothe, new costumes by Mme. Charlotte and the following principal artists:—Mrs. James A. Oates, Miss Marion Taylor, Messrs. George L. Fox, H. T. Allen, Wm. Orane, Charles Drew and J. W. Thorpe. This opera achieved a great success in London, and there is here considerable curiosity to witness it.

NIBLO'S GARDEN was opened for the fall and winter season on August 15th, when Mr. Forrest's fellow artists appeared upon the metropolitan boards after an absence of eight years, a portion of which time he has spent in California, where he made a most legitimate success. At the time of closing the engagement for Mr. Barrett to appear at this house, it was confidently expected that he would be enabled to appear in a new drama which had been written for him by Mr. Dion Boucicault, but that gentleman objected to the production of any new piece from his pen in New York city, when the run, in the event of its proving successful, should be limited to such a brief space of time as had been set apart for Mr. Barrett's engagement. Mr. Barrett had also had in preparation for himself an original play by Mr. Brette Hart, a writer of San Francisco, but that unfortunately could not be completed in time to produce here on his opening night. Under the force of these circumstances Mr. Barrett was compelled to open in some play for which the scenery was then ready in the theatre, and accordingly the "Duke's Motto" was selected, as Mr. Barrett had played Lagadere in San Francisco for a number of weeks with the highest pecuniary and artistic success. The selection was unfortunate, as it brought him in direct comparison with Mr. Charles Fechter and Mr. William Wheatley. No matter how great Mr. Barrett's talents may be, the comparison of artists, those style may be diametrically opposed, generally results unfavorably to the last comer: for upon the first production of a new play we are charmed conjointly with the language, situations and characters of the play and the artist, and when he the language has become familiar to our ears our attention is directed solely to the artistic merits of the actor. Again first impressions are often so deeply rooted that we cannot give place or be changed by the subsequent efforts of another artist. Mr. Charles Fechter has to pass the same ordeal and suffered by comparison with the excellent artist who had originated the character. Mr. Barrett differs from both the gentlemen referred to in size, figure, style and manner, and farther than this we do not propose comparison. His impersonation of the character gives evidence of close study and much thought—more, perhaps, than such a character deserves. His action is easy and graceful, his elocution good and his voice clear and resonant, and when he shall appear in other characters he will undoubtedly achieve a fantastic success he seeks from a metropolitan audience. The play, as a whole, was well acted and attracted good audiences during the week. Mr. F. C. Bangs, who played the Regent on its last production, was very effective in Gonsagues. His acting is very sympathetic and evinces care, coloring and study. Mr. G. D. Chapin re-appeared upon our city boards after a long absence, and played the Regent with discretion. Mr. W. R. Floyd was happy in his conception of Carrickfergus, and Miss Louie Moore presented us with a charming picture of Blanche and appeared as well fitted for the part as though it had been written for her. Mme. Ponisi's return was warmly welcomed, and her impersonation of the Duchess was full of merit. To night a dramatization of Tennyson's poem of "Enoch Arden," with the title of "Under the Palm," and differing materially from all versions hitherto acted in this city, will be produced, with new scenery, and Mr. Barrett as the hero. From what we know of him the character is more in consonance with his style of acting and we think in it he will achieve success. One or two other new plays are in active preparation at this house, which will be produced during the present engagement.

THE FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE will open for the fall and winter season on Sept. 5th. A call for rehearsal on the 1st appears in our advertising columns. A new drop curtain has been painted by Mr. James Roberts, of the Society of English Water Color Artists, and many alterations and improvements have been made in the auditorium. An inspection thereof by the press and others, occurs on Monday evening, Aug. 22d.

AT WALLACK'S THEATRE J. K. EMMETT is still presenting us an admirable picture of the German emigrant, Fritz. The business during the week has been good, notwithstanding that two theatres have commenced their fall and winter seasons. Mr. Emmet's character songs are nightly received with enthusiasm. The regular season at this house will commence about the middle of September.

ALMADE DE VOSS appeared at Niblo's on the 15th, both afternoon and evening, at Wood's Museum, in his own drama, entitled the "Ace of Spades," which presents an improbable picture of New York life. Any attempt to give the plot thereof or to criticise the artists who appear therein would be futile. From the plans mapped out for next season at this house we may expect a higher order of entertainment than has recently been given here.

AT THE NEW BOWERY Mr. "Sickles" is not found to attract good audiences, and Mme. Kathi Lanner and her Viennoise ballet troupe are still received with favor. A new ballet in three acts and six tableaux, composed by Lanner and entitled "Uriella, or the Demon of the Mine. Night," is announced as being in active preparation.

MR. F. G. MAXDEX is writing a drama for the California comedian, Mr. Joe Murphy, and also making his star engagements for the coming season.

DAVID BIDWELL left for New Orleans on Aug. 21st, and T. B. MacDonough left on the same evening for St. Louis. Dr. Spalding, the other member of the firm, remains in this city. The company for the southern circuit, under the management of the above gentlemen, will leave the city on Sept. 4th, as will be seen by reference to our advertising columns.

AVERY SMITH, the well known circus proprietor, has contributed $100 to the fund for procuring a testimonial to the gentlemen instrumental in abolishing the two per cent revenue tax on public amusements, already referred to in our issue of the 13th inst. The following well known professional gentlemen have likewise contributed the several sums set against their respective names:—Frank E. Aiken, manager of Wood's Museum, Chicago, Ill., $100; James A. Oates, $50; W. Horace Lingard, $50; George Fuller, manager of the Opera House, Louisville, Ky., $50, and Dan Bryant $50.

MISS MARTHA WREN will not appear at the Olympic Theatre on Aug. 22d, as announced. We are informed that the part she was to have played has been combined with the part for which Mrs. James A. Oates was cast, and that Miss Wren was offered a small sum to compromise her engagement, which she refused, and an attempt having been made to discharge her, she will probably bring the matter before the courts.

MESSRS. HOWELL AND SIMMONDS, the well known theatrical agents, are arranging tours for first-class combinations, troupes and stars, as will be seen by their advertisement in another column, announcing the coming engagements for the Lydia Thompson Troupe, the Lingard Combination, Maggie Mitchell, and J. K. Emmet. By this arrangement considerable trouble and much useless expense in traveling ahead will be saved, and time will be printed matter if required.

AT THE BOWERY THEATRE the variety season was brought to a close on Saturday, Aug. 20th. On the whole, it was not a success, pecuniarily. The theatre will be opened occasionally for benefits, and the regular fall and winter season will be inaugurated on Saturday, Sept. 3d, with the following stock company:—Mr. E. F. Stetson, leading man, his first appearance here; Mr. W. Marden, Mr. G. W. Thompson, Mr. George France, first low comedian, his first appearance here; Mr. Charles Foster, Mr. J. Winter, Mr. J. McClosky, Mr. T. Barry, Mr. M. Pike, Mr. P. Connelly, Mr. A. Douglass, Mr. Fischer and others; Mrs. W. G. Jones, Miss Polly Booth, Miss Millie Sackett, Mrs. E. T. Stetson, Mrs. G. France, Mrs. P. Connelly, with the full corps de ballet; Mr. B. J. Deane, leader of the orchestra; Mr. William Crane, machinist; Mr. R. L. Weed, scenic artist.

MR. W. H. WHALLEY was the recipient of a farewell benefit at the Bowery Theatre last evening, Aug. 23d.

MR. J. H. BOWERS, an actor, but for some years past identified with ministrelsy, has been confined to his residence for a long period by illness, and his friends propose giving him a benefit at the Bowery Theatre on Aug. 23d.

SANDY SPENCER has secured a lease of the New York Theatre, and purposes soon to open it as a first class theatre comique. It is now undergoing extensive alterations, among which will be the removal of the tower.

MRS. ALICE MAUDE MCMAHON, the wife of Mr. D. McMahon, cornet player, well known in amusement circles, and the daughter of Joseph Braham, who is at present the leader of the orchestra at Tony Pastor's Opera House, died in this city on Aug. 19th, aged 19 years. The funeral took place on Sunday P. M., the 21st, from her late residence, No. 49 Orchard street, at which the profession was largely represented.

FATTIE STEWART'S WIFE presented him on Sunday morning, Aug. 14th, with a bouncing boy weighing 13 pounds, which so titillated the cockles of Fattie's heart, pounds, which so titillated the cockles of Fattie's heart, that on last Thursday morning he wined the entire company of the Theatre Comique, where he is at present playing.

MR. WYNDHAM CLARK, the "Scottish tenor vocalist," arrived in this city the past week, he having been singing for some few weeks past with Jennie Wilmore's burlesque troupe, which closed its present season at Hamilton, Canada, on Aug. 16th.

MR. CHARLES PELL, the well known circus agent, arrived in this city from California last week.

THE J. W. LINGARD MEMORIAL TESTIMONIAL, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to erecting a monument over the grave of that gentleman, will take place at the Bowery Theatre on Wednesday Evening, August 24th, for which occasion a large number of volunteers, estimated at 800 in number, comprising representatives of the dramatic, variety and minstrel professions, have volunteered their services. The performances will be under the direction of a committee of twenty-six prominent gentlemen, embracing many personal friends of the deceased, and a special committee of thirteen gentlemen from the Order of Elks, of which the deceased was a member. Theodore Moss has been appointed the treasurer, and will have charge of the proceeds of the benefit.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE during the past week, the principal novelty consisted of the new comic trick pantomime, by Charles Abbott, entitled Nick-Nack, which was excellently placed upon the stage, considering its limited facilities for such performances. It was well performed and will continue, no doubt, to occupy a prominent position upon the bills for some time to come. Paul Martinetti has been engaged to personate the harlequin. Business has been excellent during the entire week.

THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS announces the commencement of their regular season at San Francisco Hall, on Monday, August 29th. The company will comprise all the favorites of the past season.

MISS MARIETTA RAVEL and Martin W. Hanley arrived in this city on Aug. 17th from Montreal, C. E., where she played a successful engagement the previous week.

AT TONY PASTOR'S OPERA HOUSE the business during the past week has been good. The attractions for the present week will consist of Johnny Wild, who will make his first appearance after an absence of three years, Miss Jennie Engle, the charming vocalist, who has also been absent from these boards for two years, and Miss Minnie Grey will make her first appearance in this city. Of the old favorites, Nelse Seymour, Billy Sheppard, Frank Kerns and Billy Carter still remain, and Tony Pastor will enliven the occasion with new songs.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 643 Broadway, attends to the various wants of managers and the profession, and is prepared to attend to the wants of variety artists, several of whom he at present needs. He is agent for the Vennoise Ballet Troupe, Laura Keene's southern circuit of theatres, and several other first class theatres, troupes and stars. For further information consult his advertisements.

Dramatic.

THE SENSATION of the past week at Fox's American Theatre, Philadelphia, was the "Can-Can," as danced by the four blondes, viz:—Rose Lucile, Lillie Whitney, Sallie Maddocks and Minnie Neigle. To say that the varied and suggestive motions of the blondes created a great enthusiasm and called forth curious and odd remarks is true; some old sinners affected a modesty they do not possess, and only went a single eye on the Can-Cannish "poetry of motion." The quartette of dancers work very well together, and seem to enjoy themselves amazingly. Charles Howard's old man act was loudly applauded, as were John Mulligan's specialties. The house has been crowded every night, and the same strong bill will be presented during the present week.

M. C. MIRAN advertises that he is prepared to arrange for "The Path Paved with Gold" and other dramas.

THE WALNUT STREET THEATRE, Philadelphia, opened for the season of 1870-71 on Saturday evening, Aug. 20th, presenting its company in the sporting drama of the "Flying Scud." There was a good attendance, and the favorite members of the company were well received on making their appearance. It is not considered exactly fair to criticise on Saturday night's opening performance of a new season, as there are many little annoyances to which the management is subjected, which are not so observable when the forces have been working together for a little while. Applause was liberal during the progress of the play, and quite an excitement was created by the sensational scene of the race for the Derby. The drama will Scud—we trust not under bare poles—until further notice. The following is a complete list of the company and officers enlisted for the season just entered upon, viz:—

Charles Walcot, leading and character business; W. A. Chapman, stage manager and low comedy; Lewis Morrison, leading heavy business; W. H. Bailey, first old man; James Taylor, juvenile business; E. A. Emerson, first walking gentleman and jeune premier; Mrs. J. H. Jones, W. Lomas, D. E. Reilly, J. P. Duncan; F. Stahl, prompter; W. Williams; Miss Annie Graham, leading lady; Mrs. Charles Walcot, soubrette; Mrs. W. A. Chapman, first old woman; Miss Rose Wood, first walking lady; Miss Emily Duncan, second old woman; Miss Mary Barr, second walking ladies; Miss Laura Reed, Miss Fanny Henry, Miss Susie Price, Miss Jennie Todey and Miss Mary Cranshaw. Simon Hassler leads the orchestra; George Heflige is scenic artist, with John Morton as assistant. Arthur Wright is carpenter, and John Jolly and Alexander Wilson, assistant carpenters; Charles Burns, ticket agent; Edward Wood, property man, and Charles Hoffman, assistant property man; Chas. Ricker, wardrobe keeper. Mr. Hemphill is manager.

OF BOSTON THEATRICALS our correspondent, "Coriolanus," writing under date of Aug. 20th, says:—"The announcement of that fine old comedy, 'The Heir at Law,' and the inherent attractions of an opening night had the effect of drawing together a very large audience on Monday, the 15th inst., and, in spite of the warm weather, the occasion was a most enjoyable one. All who go to the theatre at all are thoroughly acquainted with Mr. Warren's superb impersonation of Dr. Pangloss, yet no one ever tires of seeing it again and again, as his reception on Monday evening proved. The comedy was suitablycast. McClennin as Lord Duberly, and Mrs. Vincent as Lady Duberly, were all that could be desired, while Annie Clarke, as Cicely, was admirable, notwithstanding the fact of its being rather out of her line. Frank Hardenbergh deserves especial mention for his really fine rendering of Zekiel Homespun, which was one of the chief features of the evening; Barron was hardly up to the character of Dick Dowlas, his style being too sedate and melo-dramatic for the lively Dick. Of the minor characters, Messrs. Burrows, Norris and Ring were good. It was a pleasure, outside of the merits of the play itself and of the acting, to sit and watch the reception given to the old favorites as they made, one by one, their appearance, the applause was so hearty and so thorough. On Tuesday Robinson's 'Caste' was presented, and, as it was the occasion of Miss Laura Phillips' first appearance here in many years, it was well attended. Miss Phillips was cast for Polly Eccles, and her performance of the character was very good. She shows signs of ability, is pretty, lively, and has a good knowledge of stage requirements, dresses well and in good taste. What shortcomings she had on Tuesday were doubtless ow re-painting and upholstering prior to its re-opening on the 29th inst.

At Smith's Opera House, East Saginaw, Mich., Miss Annie Hindle and Mlle. De Vere have played to great engagements during the week ending the 13th inst. Frank Frayed (Miss Cordie) made their first appearance there.

Fanny Lucille is dancing at the Theatre Comique in this city, and not at Fox's American, Philadelphia, as had been advertised.

Harry Cathelland opened at the Varieties Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., on August 10th, for two weeks, and goes thence to Indianapolis, opening at Sam Shelby's on the 27th.

The Oriental Music Hall, San Francisco, Cal., is in the flood tide of success, under the able management of Chas. A. Parker. Miss Grace Darby has recovered from her recent severe indisposition, and has re-appeared. The great card at present is Mlle Forrestelle, who allows a stone weighing some 250 lbs. to be broken with a sledge hammer upon her chest. By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that talent is wanted.

At the Metropolitan Hall, Washington, D. C., business continues very good. Tony Harvey, Ethiopian comedian, commenced an engagement on the 15th inst., and in the minstrel scene took the tamborine end. He is an excellent delineator of Ethiopian character, being quite successful in its portrayal. He closed his engagement on the 20th and goes to the Baltimore Opera House, Baltimore. Ella wild, Kate Harrison and Alice Mindil will open on the 11th. Mlle. Grey also leaves on the 20th and opens at Tony Pastor's in a short time thereafter. Dody Zanfretta, Joe Mack, Larry Tooley and Marie Zoel will retire from the company on the 27th. Miss Zanfretta goes to the Front Street Theatre at Baltimore. Joe Mack goes to Broom's Opera House, Memphis, and Miss Zoel makes a jump to the Academy of Music, New Orleans. On the 22d Bolina Pascale, vocalist; Josephine Walby, trapeziste, and Agnes Robinson, vocalist, put in a first appearance. On the 29th the company will undergo a complete reconstruction, the following new performers being under engagement to appear:—Billy Diamond, Ethiopian comedian; Clark Butler, comic vocalist; Charley Brown, California comedian, and Marie Roscelle, vocalist. James Porter, interlocutor and stage manager, will continue at the helm. So says our correspondent, "Novice."

Rhodes's Opera House, School's Variety Theatre and Thompson's Parlor Hall in Memphis, Tenn., still continue open. Mr. Thompson will open the Vicksburg Theatre, at Vicksburg, Miss., this fall, having leased it for three years. Charley White, manager of the Varieties, left on the 21st for New York, in search of talent and novelties.

At the Tammany Hall, Bay City, Mich., the fresh attractions the past week were Miss Ada Whiting, Mr. Pete Baker and Miss Viola Clifton. Mr. Lon Chapin started East on the 19th, to engage an entirely new company.

John Piper, of Piper's Opera House, Virginia City, was in San Francisco, Cal., on Aug. 13th, organizing a variety company for that house.

The Theatre Comique, at Detroit, Mich., under the continued control of Manager Welch, assisted by W. J. Thompson, will be opened on Aug. 28th. The entire troupe is to appear on the 27th, for the initial performance at Young Men's Hall. During the recess, the auditorium has been thoroughly renovated and new scenery has been painted.

Messrs. Thompson & Riggs, agents, 512 Broadway, N. Y., are in need of burlesque artists, pantomimists, vocalists, and artists in all branches of the variety business.

Sam Devere, banjoist, Irish vocalist, &c., can be engaged after September 15th. Address him care of this office.

Variety Artists are wanted by Billy Pastor, who advertises.

A Danseuse and a lady vocalist are wanted for the Academy of Music, Richmond, Va. Charley Kane is stage manager at this House.

J. H. Rogers' Variety Troupe performed at Coopersville, Mich., Aug. 15th, 17th and 20th, and are to be at Muskegan, 22d, 23d and 24th; at Grand Haven, 25th, 26th and 27th. John Denier, on the 18th, made his 35th rope ascension in Michigan, and Maggie Willett is one of the principal features of the company and a great favorite.

A. Hoffman advertises that he can be engaged as violinist for a variety or minstrel company.

The Varieties Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., opened on the 15th to an overflowing house. Among the principal performers were Ida Devere, dancer; Frank Christie, skipping rope dance; Annie Gibbons, clog dancer; Adele St. Clair, vocalist; Walter Bray, in an act called "Sugar Bob;" C. A. Gardner, Dutch songs; Alfred Stewart, Irish songs; Dick Sands, cloggist; Tommy Sully, song and dance; Ned Buckley, comedian, and Ida Buckley, vocalist. Prof. Torege is leader of the orchestra:.....Mr. E. V. Beamer will open the Academy of Music in the same city on Sept. 12th.

Annie Corella, a versatile musical artist and comedienne, has formed an alliance with L. W. Harleigh, author, composer and protean artist, and managers desiring talent are referred to their card in another column.

Hugh Heath can be addressed as per advertisement.

C. M. Sherman's Show will start out about Sept. 1st, for a tour through the south and west, with an entirely new outfit, we understand. A lady comic singer and dancer is wanted for this company.

One of the Bensley Brothers, with Washburn's last sensation, while performing at Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 17th, fell and broke three of his ribs, while performing the double giant swing, in consequence of one of the wires breaking.

Negro Minstrelsy.

Tax on Gross Receipts.—Upon this subject we have received the following communication from Waynesburg, Ill., dated August 13th, 1870.

Friend Queer.—I take the opportunity to acquaint you and call your attention to some facts that I now think the profession should be acquainted with. This issue of your paper presents a very flattering and liberal donation towards a fund, etc., to Messrs. J. H. McVicker, Chas. Gayler and W. E. Spaulding for services in the revenue matter. You, sir, for the past year, have been laboring in that cause. I presented a petition in behalf of the exhibitions at large, asking a repeal or a reduction of one per cent., presenting all the disadvantages and inconveniences, giving reference to many members of Congress, as well as Governor Curtis, sustaining my character and indorsing my prayer for its abolition. Commissioner Delano wrote me that my favor was laid before the Committee on Ways and Means, and that they would give it their consideration. I presume that my letter in this matter had as much tendency to assist in its repeal as anything that the above named gentlemen could have done. I have had others to assist; the collectors themselves have asked its repeal, as their duties were disagreeable in this particular, of looking after dwelling parties and the two per cent. Now, sir, as the big guns have spread themselves and exhibited a showy figure at the end of each of their names, I think that my claims should not be forgotten or overlooked. If any one is deserving of a testimonial for such service, I claim to be acknowledged as one of its champions. In my presentation I took the liberty of calling their attention to Chas. Shay, Billy Pastor, Sam Sharpley, Duprez and Benedict's, Newcomb's, Low Gaylord's, Arlington's and others, stating the heavy expense each of us was under and how disagreeable it was to pay two per cent. when we were performing so many times to less than expenses. With this I leave it in your hands.

Sam. S. Sanford.

[If minstrels and others are satisfied that your claims are just and proper, and that your services were instrumental in assisting in the repeal of the tax referred to, it is but right that some action should be taken by those interested.—Ed. Clipper.]

Happy Cal Wagner's Minstrels appeared at Auburn, N. Y., in Casey's Opera House, on Aug. 18th.

Billy Emerson's Minstrels commenced a season at the Olympic Theatre St. Louis, under the management of Messrs. Spalding, Bidwell and MacDonough, on Aug. 15th. The receipts of the opening night amounted to $787.50.

Charley Shaw, banjo soloist and general performer, whose address is care of this office, can be engaged for the fall season.

Simmons & Slocum's Minstrels—who have been giving a few preparatory rehearsal performances in town adjourn to the city of Philadelphia to open their new Arch Street Opera House, in that city, on Monday evening next, Aug. 29th. The following is said to be the company engaged for the season:—Lew Simmons, John S. Cox, E. N. Slocum, Wm. Blakney, Johnny Hart, Andy McKee, W. P. Sweetman, Eddie Fox, Robert Fraser, Wm. Eiseman, Chas. Folly, Wm. Ewers, Wm. Serter, Chas. Brown, Chas. Heywood, Geo. Clairidon, Joseph Norrie, Wm. Clark, Wm. A. Brisco, Geo. Harris, John Chrcser, Wm. Blaber, J. S. Stout, Ed. G. Stone, W. H. Chambers and Chas. Dettro. The troupe is strong in numbers, and it is to be hoped that a corresponding degree of excellence will be exhibited when the members come before the public. We shall be present at the initial performance, and give our views of the merits of the company and the entertainment.

Carncross and Dixey's Minstrel's, of Philadelphia, evidently mean to make a stout fight against all competitors, as they have greatly strengthened their exercise for the concert season, and now present an excellent array of talent, as may be seen by looking over the annexed list:—Frank Moran, Harry Lehr, Bobby Newcomb, George H. Coes, Frank Arnold, E. F. Dixey, J. L. Carncross, J. H. Ross, John Armstrong, W. L. Hobbs, J. Cheevers, E. Kennedy, George Charles, Charles Gibbons, J. W. Lamont, Charles Stevens, T. J. Prestwich, J. W. Holden, J. Beck, J. S. Paul, Samuel Hosfield, J. A. Harney and Charles Weeks. The opening was fixed for Monday evening, Aug. 22d, when a number of fresh acts were to be presented for the first time, including the "School for Scandal," "The Dearest One of All," by Bobby Newcomb; "Musical Metamorphosis," "Quiet Lodgings," etc. R. F. Simpson remains as treasurer, and J. L. Carncross as manager.

Albert Hilbert, female impersonator, can be engaged for the coming season. His address is care of this office.

Duprez and Benedict's Minstrels—who were "assassinated by Indians," through the connivance of the New York Herald—are "just as well and hearty as they ever were in their lives," and performing to immense business in San Francisco, California. As we intimated in our last, the Herald's account of the attack made upon them by Indians was a concern, having not the slightest foundation in fact. After leaving Salt Lake they proceeded to Frisco, where they arrived in due season, and opened at the California Theatre on the 8th inst. Previous to their arrival the city had been thoroughly billed and illuminated by the mammoth pictorial posters of the troupe, and when the evening came for the initial performance there was a dense mass of humanity in front of the California Theatre, and in half an hour after opening the doors the house was packed from parquet to gallery with upwards of two thousand people, while several hundred others were compelled to leave, being unable to obtain admittance. The receipts on that night were nearly nineteen hundred dollars in gold. On Tuesday, 9th, the second night, the house was again packed, and hundreds were standing at a dollar each admission. On the occasion of their third appearance, on the 10th, the receipts amounted to more than thirteen hundred dollars. The season is for three weeks, when the troupe are to give performances in San Jose, Stockton, Sacramento, Marysville and Virginia City, and then, probably, "on to Philadelphia."

Lew Johnson has formed a minstrel troupe of colored men, and they are now performing with success in the northwest. Johnny Morton and Frank Essex are the end men, and they also perform a double clog. Charley Delancy, song and dance; Master Frank Maynard, burlesque female impersonator; Hank Bridgewaters, comedian; J. L. West, leader of orchestra; P. Spaulding, second violin; J. S. Broadwell, cornet-a-piston; V. Haywood, clarionette; Master R. Bodie, flute and piccolo; S. Coleman, double bass; Alf. White, interlocutor, baritone singer and musical director; E. M. Rector, balladist and solo guitarist; Mr. Hardy, tenor, and George Carlin, basso, compose the troupe. They exhibited at Fort Wayne, Ind., August 19th and 20th.

Simmons and Slocum's Minstrels are billed to appear at Pottsville, Pa., on Aug. 29th.

Bryant's Minstrels are billed to appear at Barton's Opera House, Syracuse, Aug. 22d and 23d; Tweedie Hall, Albany, 24th and 25th; Opera House, Troy, 26th and 27th.

Barnard's Minstrels are billed to appear at Rochester, N. Y., August 22d; Calais, 23d and 24th; Eastport, 25th; thence to St. John, N. B.

Arlington's Minstrels played at Houghton, Mich., on August 11th.

Hugh Hamill left La Rue's Minstrels, in St. Paul, Minn., on August 4th, and is at present at his home in Montreal, C. E., for a few weeks' vacation. He will shortly rejoin the same troupe as balladist and interlocutor.

A Card recently published in our paper by J. H. Mack, purporting to have been written by Low Gaylord, concerning Joe Gaylord, is pronounced by both those parties a barefaced imposition, neither of them knowing anything about it until it appeared in print. This makes it look very dark for Mack, and if he transacts his agency business in that manner always it would be better than all connection between him and the profession should be severed.

Billy Emerson's Minstrels are billed at the new Memphis Theatre, Memphis, Tenn., for Aug. 29th.

Harry Emerson, a youth of eighteen, wants to join a minstrel troupe. His address is care of this office.

Charley King, comedian, banjoist and end man, advertises that he can be engaged after Sept. 10th.

Brady Cotton, Ethiopian comedian, advertises that he can be engaged.

John A. Armstrong, who has been for the past three years with Skiff & Gaylord's Minstrels as a clog dancer, has severed his connection with that company and had engaged as Sole player with Carncross and Dixie's Minstrels, who open their opera house in Philadelphia for the season this evening, Aug. 22d.

Mr. G. W. H. Griffin left Bryant's Minstrels at Buffalo, N. Y., on Aug. 15th, in consequence of a prior engagement with R. M. Hooley, of Hooley's Minstrels, Brooklyn, N. Y., of which company he is to be the stage manager the coming season. In our advertising columns, from his pen, will be found an amusing description of a narrow escape from death.

Elwood's Female Minstrels played at Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 20th, 21st and 22d, whence they were to go to Scranton the 23d and 24th.

Kelly and Leon's Minstrels, upon ascertaining that their new hall could not be completed for opening on Aug. 22d, have determined to play as follows:—At Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 22d; Stamford, 23d; New Brunswick, N. J., 24th; Newark, 25th; Paterson, 26th, and Williamsburgh, L. I., 27th. Now confidently expected they will be able to open in this city on the 29th inst.

Circuses.

Tommy Ward, second clown, has left J. T. Johnson's Circus, and joined M. O. Connor's Great Western Circus, which performed in Brunswick, Mo., August 16th; Dewit, 17th; Lobrey, 18th, and Renick, 19th. The following artists are now with that troupe:—Dan Cross, principal rider; Ed. Schofield, light and heavy balancer; Frank Castle, Fred. Castle, Willie Batcheider, leapers; the Austin Brothers, flying trapeze; Charles Lee Fowler, principal clown and J. S. Key, two and four horse rider. Billy Banks has charge of the minstrel show.

"Old" John Robinson's Circus exhibited at Memphis, Tenn., three days, commencing Aug. 15th.

The European Circus exhibited at East Saginaw, Aug. 15th; Saginaw City, 16th, and Bay City, 17th; will be at Lowell, Mich., 24th, and Grand Rapids, 25th.

Bailey and Co.'s Circus and Caravan will exhibit at Newburgh, N. Y., Aug. 27th; Montgomery, 29th, and Middletown, 30th.

Gardner and Forepaugh's Circus and Menagerie was seized by the sheriff at Reamstown, Pa., on Aug. 15th, who accompanied the show to Lancaster, Pa., where they gave the two performances advertised on the 16th. From Adam Forepaugh, of Philadelphia, we have received the following intelligence concerning the affair:—The circus was stopped by Gardner's son-in-law, Charles Kennan, and John Forepaugh's father and four brothers. Gardner gave Charles Kennan a judgment note on Aug. 15th for $8,000, and the following confessed judgments have been served on the show:—Charles Forepaugh, a brother, $750; William Forepaugh, a brother, $1,400; John Forepaugh, Sr., father, $750; Andrew J. Forepaugh, brother, $1,500, and a second judgment in favor of the latter for $800. Adam Forepaugh had nothing whatever to do with stopping the show, and thinks that the printers and company will be paid in full. This concern has been re-organized, and will henceforth be known as Madigan & Co.'s Circus. They are billed to exhibit on Berks street, Philadelphia, August 22d and 23d.

Campbell's Circus and Menagerie is announced at Greenville, Pa., for Aug. 22d; Meadville, 23d; Kleckneerville, 24th, and Union Mills, 25th.

Van Amburgh's Menagerie is billed to exhibit at Shrewsbury, Pa., on Aug. 26th; York, 27th.

Van Amburgh's Circus and Menagerie exhibited at Chatfield, Minn., Aug. 19th; St. Charles, 20th.

W. H. Stewart, light and heavy balancer and song and dance man, who traveled with G. G. Grady's Circus last season, rejoined that company on Aug. 1st.

Forepaugh's Circus and Menagerie will exhibit at Buffalo, N. Y., on Aug. 22d and 23d.

Dr. Thayer's Circus is announced to exhibit in Washington, D. C., on Aug. 22d, 23d, 24th and 25th; Alexandria, Va., 26th, and Georgetown, D. C., 27th.

Spaun and Mumaugh's Circus exhibited at Pittsfield, Mass., Aug. 18th, and Chatham, N. Y., 16th.

The Ali Ben Abdallah Troupe of Bedouin Arabs are prepared to accept long or short engagements after the close of the tenting season. They can be addressed care of this office.

In James Robinson's Circus and Animal Show so many changes have occurred since the season commenced that we give a list of the company as it is at present:—James Robinson, Master Clarence, Mlle. Demereau, Thomas Watson and Lorenzo Maya, equestrians; the Victorelli Brothers, with Smead, Lester Spencer and Minnroe, acrobats; Lee Powell, clown, and Phil Diefenbach, ring master; A. Henderson, manager; Charles Dickinson, treasurer; A. J. Springer, general agent; Robert McCormick, director of tent; Charles White, lion performer; Antoine Hebing, leader of band, and W. C. P. A. Older's Circus and Menagerie is in Central Illinois.

Yankee Robinson's Great Show has emerged from the Black River country, and during the past week, exhibited in Oswego, Rome and Syracuse, where the receipts exceeded those of last year, and proved to be the largest of the present season.

O'Brien's Monster Menagerie has just emerged from Egypt, Ill., and is now in Southern Indians. Charley Castle, the agent, says he has lived on water melons for the past four weeks, and looks as large as Charley Pell, the California agent.

Madigan & Co.'s Circus exhibits at Fourth and Berks street, Philadelphia, on August 22d and 23d.

Miscellaneous.

Advance Agents and others about traveling through the states would save themselves considerable trouble by consulting Sweet's American Directory and the Travelers' Guide. See advertisement in another column.

Harrington Opera House, Providence, R. I., has a seating capacity for 2,000 persons, with a large stage well stocked with scenery. It is situated in the heart of the city. For terms, including city license, mechanics and box office, address Corey Brothers, music store.

Animal Curiosities are advertised for sale by A. D. Wellman in another column.

Lila and Zoe, female trapezists, can be engaged through Mons. Delave, whose address find elsewhere.

John Bogan continues to attend to the wants of banjoists and teaches jig and clog dancing. For further particulars read his advertisement.

Frank Curbine, who traveled two seasons with MacEvoy's Hibernicon, advertises that he can be engaged as pianist and lecturer.

Tom Murphy, tight rope artist and sensational gymnast, performed at Schenectady, N. Y., on August 18th.

Charles McEvoy's Hibernicon will be exhibited for nine nights at the Masonic Hall in Pittsburgh, Pa., on August 22d. Mr. William Lawlor appears as Barney the Guide, Maria Dalton McEvoy as Norah, Miss Kate Hilpine as Mrs. O'Callaghan, and the historical descriptions will be by Charles McEvoy.

Dowling Hall, Terre Haute, Ind., has been enlarged and improved by the addition of a larger stage, with convenient dressing rooms, &c., and will be ready for re-opening about the end of September or October 1st. For further particulars read the advertisement.

Robt. Byrne, "Barney the Guide," can be addressed at Newport, R. I.

Union Hall, Johnstown, Pa., is recommended to the attention of managers and agents through the medium of a card in another column, which states that it will seat about one thousand persons and is furnished with stage and accessories.

Allyn Hall, Hartford, Conn., is advertised to rent for dramatic and other entertainments. It has a stage with scenery, drop curtains, &c., complete, and will seat about one thousand persons.

Jon Gaylord, working agent, advertises that he can be engaged.

Dewohn, wizard and ventriloquist, can be engaged to travel with a gift show. Address as per advertisement.

Parties having a stereopticon for sale are referred to an advertisement in another column.

Commodore Foote and Sister's Troupe exhibited at Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 15th; Cherokee, 16th; Haisting, 17th; Grand Rapids, 18th, and Ionia, 20th.

Prof. Dennison was to have given a balloon ascension at East Saginaw, Mich., on Aug. 11th, but while inflating the balloon with hot air one of the poles supporting it broke, and fell into a dense crowd of men, women and children, killing one woman instantly, which put a stop to the ascension. The next day the Professor and assistants were arrested for causing the woman's death through criminal carelessness, and they were put under bonds to appear for trial in September. The woman who was killed was the proprietress of a bagnio in that city.

Mr. E. B. Hatch, of the firm of Treyser and Hatch, bill posters in Milwaukee, Wis., was married at Warren, O., on Aug. 6th, by Mayor Dawson, to Miss Emma Henry, of the latter city.

The Satsuma Royal Japanese Troupe played last week at the Opera House, St. Paul, Minn. They are billed at Kalamazoo, Mich., for Aug. 22d and 23d.

The Legislature of Georgia has adopted a resolution to purchase Kimball's Opera House, at Atlanta, for the Capitol.

C. P. Sherman, manager for Martino, the magician, writes as follows from Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 22d:—

You can be assured by the gallant little C. P. Sherman himself that Charley Forbes is under written contract, and will act as agent for Martino for the season of '70 and '71. As Charley never has, as yet, been known to break his word or contract, I think there must be some mistake about the "Gallant little Commodore's" communication.

In a recent issue we published the purport of a communication from Commodore Foote, assuring us that Mr. Forbes was engaged to him "under written contract." Having given both sides of the story we leave the matter.

Mr. Alf Burnett and Miss Helen Nash gave three performances at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio, commencing August 18th. Professor Silvester, the illusionist, was announced to appear in conjunction with these artists, but failed to do so. Professor Everett was engaged on the 19th to supply his place.

Professor F. S. Flanders' troupe of Indian vocalists exhibited at Bath, New York, on August 20th.

The Satsuma Troupe of Japanese gave two performances in Janesville, Wis., on August 19th and 20th.

A Stock of Costumes are advertised for sale cheap, by A. Fredenheim, in another column.

Mrs. Tillson, costumer, 289 Bowery, N. Y., furnishes stage wardrobes, &c.

Girardey's Opera House, Augusta, Ga., can be rented by addressing the proprietor as per advertisement.

Hoxie's Hall, Knoxville, Tenn., is centrally located, will seat about five hundred persons, and is fitted up with scenery, drop curtain, &c. Managers will find the proprietor's card elsewhere.

Amateur.

The Shakespeare Dramatic Association commence their sixth season on Sept. 1st. The bill will consist of "Still Waters Run Deep," with Mr. E. Bartram as Mr. Potter, Mr. Eaflin as Capt. Hawksley, Mr. Calvert as John Middmay, Miss L. Hughes as Mrs. Sternhold, and Miss E. Warren as Mrs. Middmay. The farce of "Sketches in India," will conclude the performance, with Messrs. Mortimer, Broomley and Uhlfelder in the principal roles. A new arrangement in the numbering of the seats has been introduced, insuring every person a seat and doing away with standing during a performance, a great objection last season.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

Dramatic.

Of London, Eng., Theatricals our advices are up to August 7th. What with the war excitement, and the approaching close of the session of Parliament, theatrical amusements are now reduced to the smallest proportions. The Gaiety and the Adelphi will soon be added to the list of theatres which have been closed for the season. There has been no change at any of the other theatres save at the Grecian and the Britannia, at both of which new pieces have been produced. At the former a drama by Mr. Macdermott entitled "Truth and Falsehood of Kate," has been produced. At the latter a new drama entitled "The Lancashire Lass" has been produced. The following is the cast of the former piece:—

MANAGERS AND AGENTS
Are invited to examine the merits of UNION HALL, JOHNSTOWN, CAMBRIA CO., PA.
This town is on Penna. Central Railroad, 78 miles east of Pittsburgh; population over 17,000.
UNION HALL
is the most popular one of the place, and its reputation for good order is such that it is the FAMILY RESORT, and draws the largest
LADY AUDIENCES.
The Hall is on the ground floor, has a main entrance 15 feet wide, and two side exit doors. 1,000 persons can get out in less than 5 minutes. This is the only Hall in the place with more than one mode of egress, and that one over 3 feet 6 inches wide.

Union Hall is 104 by 60 feet; ceiling 50 feet high; it seats 600 on main floor, in arm and half arm chairs, and 300 in the Gallery. Stage, 26 feet deep, 40 feet wide; Proscenium opening, 25 feet 9 inches wide, 19 feet high. Full set of scenery on flats. This is the only stage in the town large enough for MINSTREL BUSINESS OR SPECTACULAR PIECES.
The Stage is provided with commodious dressing-rooms, and every convenience for comfort. There is a private stage door. The Auditorium is handsomely frescoed and decorated. Altogether the Hall is a beauty.

JOHN B. GOUGH SAYS OF UNION HALL,
"Your hall seemed attractive to the eye, very comfortable and well ventilated, and I particularly noticed there was resonance without echo, making it easy to speak in."

J. K. EMMET AND W. D. ROBERTS SAY,
"We consider Union Hall, Johnstown, Pa., far superior.....in every particular."

Union Hall controls the most and the best bill boards. James D. Hamilton, Janitor and City Bill Poster.

SENIOR "PEAK FAMILY."

FRED. G. BERGER,
Cornet, Violin, Flute, Harp and Bell Player.

MISS HELEN C. HAYS,
An accomplished Soprano, Pianist, Alto Horn and Bell Player. (Her First season with this Troupe).

MISS HENRIETTA BERGER,
Zithern and Staff Bell Soloist, Violinist and Tenor Horn Player.

J. HENRY GARDNER,
Cornet and Clarionet Soloist, Violoncellist and leader of Cornet Band.

HENRY G. BERGER,
Solo Flute and Piccolo Player, E Flat Base and Bell Ringer.

MAST. BERNHART BERGER,
Violinist, Snare Drummer and Bell Player.
The above list comprises
MORE TALENT THAN WAS EVER CONCENTRATED IN ANY TROUPE UNDER THE STYLE OF "BELL RINGERS," and they can present
MORE VARIETY AT ONE ENTERTAINMENT THAN IS OFFERED BY ANY MUSICAL COMBINATION IN THIS COUNTRY.
The Bergers' Swiss Bells, comprising a set of their own importation and one purchased from MENEELY & KANON BRO'S, have been tuned and silver plated in New York city during the past summer, and now constitute the FINEST AND MOST COMPLETE SET IN AMERICA!
Their SILVER CORNET BAND, led by J. H. Gardner, which comprises a
QUARTETTE OF FEMALE PERFORMERS, is now acknowledged to be the
BEST BAND TRAVELING WITH ANY HALL ENTERTAINMENT.
And no one more readily concedes this fact than the members of the numerous troupes in the Western country, during their first season.
They have added NEW AND ELEGANT WARDROBE to their stock on hand, increased their fine set of LEDGER BILLS, which now numbers 75 mammoth sheets, expended $1,000 in lithographs, gotten up new banners and three tier stage for street parades, and, after two months of daily rehearsals, unhesitatingly assert that their entertainment for the coming season will EXCEL ANY EVER PRESENTED BY A BELL RINGING TROUPE IN THIS COUNTRY.
"TIME WILL TELL."
And the Bergers confidently abide the decision of THE PRESS, THE PUBLIC AND THE PROFESSION.

EDW. P. KENDALL, Manager.
FRED. G. BERGER, Musical Director,
21 W. W. FOWLER, Agent.
